Fathers Face Draft Call Beginning About May 1

Reserve of Single Men, and Husbands Without Children, Near Exhaustion

Tapping New Reserve

By Ben W. Gilbert

Informed Government officials expect drafting of fathers to begin about May 1 in many areas of the United States, with draft boards generally inducting married men with children into the armed forces by early summer, it was learned yesterday.

Present draft calls designed to provide an 11-million-man Army by the end of the year have forced draft boards to scrape the bottom of the barrel of single men in most areas and to start exhausting the available pool of married men in some.

Some maried men are now being drafted in the District, but unless present calls are changed, general drafting of fathers here is not expected to occur before July, District draft officials have said.

One factor expected to speed the drafting of fathers is a forthcoming policy on deferring students in a designated number of scientific professions. It is expected that all students who can complete such scientific courses by the summer of 1945 will receive deferment—further reducing the available pool of single men becoming 18. Mainly, medical and engineering students completing their courses will receive this deferment, it was learned.

"Nondeferables" First

Some married men with children are already being inducted into the armed forces. Selective Service officials admit, but only those who acquired parental status after Pearl Harbor, or at a time when induction was imminent. Fathers with a "bona fide" pre-Pearl Harbor relationship with their children may not be inducted under present Selective Service rules, although officials feel that our dwindling reserves of available manpower will force abrogation nationally of the ban by May 1.

First group of drafted fathers will include many "nondeferables"—men in specified nonessential jobs who are slated to lose their deferments after April 1, if they have not changed to more essential work. This deadline actually is May 1, since "nondeferables" automatically get another 30 days "grace" by registering for another job with the United States Employment Service.

It was not clear what effect actual drafting of fathers would have on the Kilday bill calling for the deferment of family men while single men are available, since it would presumably become meaningless if all available single men were drafted.

Students to Be deferred

At present, about 100,000 men a month reach the age of 18 and thus become subject to the draft. According to statements from Manpower and Selective Service officials, men are being inducted at the rate of 400,000 a month. Since only about 70,000 of the 18-year-olds qualify, 330,000 men a month must be provided out of the remaining pools.

Drafting of fathers will not start at the same time in all parts of the United States because of varia-

Approved by Committee

Bankhead Bill Would Defer All Farm Workers Until 1944

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday approved the Bankhead bill deferring from the draft all agricultural workers and freezing them in their farm jobs.

Under provisions of a last-minute amendment proposed by Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, the bill would be effective only for the remainder of this year.

Senator Holman said the change was approved so as to make the legislation a stop-gap until more permanent legislation — possibly calling for drafting of all civilians for war jobs—could be studied.

Strong Opposition

The vote of 9 to 7 was taken in the face of strong opposition from the War Department and Selective Service.

Senator Bankhead, who has the pledged support of 40 Senators for his bill, said the measure is necessary to assure adequate manpower for the farm and thus avoid a national food shortage crisis.

Under the Tydings amendment to the Selective Service Act, farm laborers are exempted from the draft only if they are full-time workers meeting rigid requirements on "essentiality." Local Selective Service boards have decided who measured up to the rulings and, it is claimed, have not attempted to stop enlistments of farm boys who wanted to enter one of the military services.

The Bankhead measure would make mandatory the deferment of all draft registrants "regularly engaged in an agricultural occupation or endeavor."

Subject to Board Approval

More sweepingly, it would prevent such registrants from leaving their farm jobs without consent from their Selective Service boards, who would decide whether it was in the best interest of the war effort for them to change.

Sixty per cent of all agricultural workers who have left the farms within the past two years have gone into industry, according to Selective Service figures.

Voting against the Bankhead measure were: Senators Austin (Republican) of Vermont, Gurney (Republican) of South Dakota, O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts and Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire.

Voting for it were: Senators Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado, Downey (Democrat) of California, Thomas (Democrat) of Utah, Hill

Beauty Clinic To Put Zip In War Work

By the Associated Press

Can a Government girl be happy without a girdle?

Because personnel advisers have run into questions like that, a group of New York experts is coming to the Capital next week to help stop the exit of unhappy Government girls from jobs in wartime Washington.

Lily Dache, who does hats for $35 up and sometimes for cheaper pocketbooks, will tell how to have handsome hats on an annual salary of $1440—less income taxes.

Ann Delafield, a beauty business brain-truster, will call to say to young things from small towns: "Beauty is your duty."

And from Stanley Marcus, Dallas merchant, formerly a WPB clothes chief, the Government girls may expect to find out how many figures fit fashions.

The idea of a clinic on clothes and glamor developed from the conviction of personnel counselors that they are important in social adustment and a girl's satisfaction with her job.

Currently, about 40 counselors await the Government girls' questions or concern. A year ago there were only about 20. And three years ago—would you think it—there were only three.

Planes Battering Jap Convoy; Berlin Admits Heavy Damage; Allies Retake Sbeitla in Tunisia

Nazi Attacks In North Africa Are Crushed With Big Losses

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, March 2.—The complete defeat of a series of German attacks in northern Tunisia, in which the enemys' casualties and losses in material were very high, was announced today at Allied quarters while the Allied forces in central Tunisia continued their successful advance after the capture of Sbeitla.

These troops, pushing forward behind the retreat of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, also occupied Kasserine and Feriana as well. Sbeitla is 18 miles northeast of Kasserine; Feriana is 20 miles southwest of that point.

The Allies have now regained about a third of the territory lost in south central Tunisia.

In three days of action in the north, the Axis was estimated to have lost at least 600 troops and 24 tanks—300 of the men about the town of El Aroussa, some 20 miles below what had been the apparent German objective at Beja, and another 300 in the near-by Medjez-el-Bab area.

"Details of enemy casualties during the past three days show that he has paid a heavy price in men and material and has been held in all sectors," an Allied communique said. "A considerable number of enemy tanks has been destroyed."

The Allied air arm remained in heavy and highly effective action, having scored yesterday with the destruction of 25 enemy planes against a total Allied loss of four planes. Shipping was attacked in Palermo Harbor in Sicily, railroad bridges were bombed between Sousse and Sfax, and Cairo-based heavy American bombers assaulted Naples.

In southeastern Tunisia, where the British Eighth Army has been engaged along the outer works of the Mareth Line, Allied fighter planes were active.

900 Tons of Bombs Rock Nazi Capital in Record Raid

By the Associated Press

London, March 2.—The Germans last tonight reported 191 persons were killed and 268 injured last night in the strongest scourge raid ever delivered by the R. A. F. on the Nazi capital and acknowledged through various channels that heavy damage was inflicted.

The German radio during the day made a threat of retaliation, declaring:

"The British and Americans have refused to listen to good advice. They will one day reap what they have sown."

(Only a few hours after the raid, a Berlin radio commentator had said in a broadcast heard in New York by C. B. S. that American cities "may not be safe a few months hence.")

(According to the International News Service, Swedish reports quoted by Wednesday's Daily Telegraph said buildings in Berlin were being dynamited in frantic efforts to halt the spread of the fires.)

Dispatches from Berlin itself to neutral points across the German frontier indicated the heaviest of the British night bombers had coursed freely over the center of Berlin.

They told of damage inflicted along the Unter Den Linden "as the attackers followed their way up and down the city's most illustrious street."

A Berlin dispatch to Die Tat of Zurich, Switzerland, described the raid as the biggest Berlin ever experienced and reported that the Hedwigsdom Cathedral, one of Berlin's most noted churches, was

Convoy Scattered

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Wednesday), March 3.—Allied planes braving foul weather have smashed and battered a strong Japanese convoy thrusting toward New Guinea, sinking or damaging at least four ships, and scattering the rest of a column of 14 vessels over a wide area, Allied headquarters announced today.

This was the convoy that had been sighted first off New Britain Island, protected by the weather as it drove through the seas apparently to reinforce the Japanese forces in the Lae-Salamana area of New Guinea.

But despite rain and clouds, Allied planes blasted the column yesterday in the Bismarck Sea, Downing 13 out of 40 Japanese fighter planes that fought in its protection, and wreaking heavy damage with direct hits on at least four transports, and other hits or near misses on warships and cargo vessels, the noon communique said.

"The sea battle continues," the communique said.

Coordinated Attacks

"Despite adverse weather conditions of rain, haze and thick clouds, our heavy bombers with fighter escort repeatedly struck at the convoy previously reported north of Cape Gloucester in a series of coordinated attacks," the communique said.

"Crippling blows delivered from low altitude were pressed home in the face of heavy antiaircraft fire and constant interception by enemy fighters.

"A 10,000-ton transport received direct hits with 1000-pound bombs and was left enveloped in smoke, later reported awash and sinking. An 8000-ton transport, hit amidships, burst into flames and split in two, sinking within two minutes.

"A direct hit was scored on the bow of a 6000-ton transport and a fourth vessel of medium size was severely damaged near the bow, with flames pouring from the forward hatch.

Total Toll Undetermined

"Other hits or near hits were scored against warships and cargo ships, results of which have so far been impossible to assess. Thirty to 40 enemy fighters acting as a convoy cover attacked our formations without cessation but ineffectually.

"Thirteen enemy planes were shot out of action. Remnants of the convoy are now scattered and dispersed over a wide area of the sea northeast of Finschhafen, appar-

Combined Tax Plan Offered; Canada Cancels Part of '42 Bill

Canadians to Pay Higher Levies In 4 Categories

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, March 2.—A pay-as-you-go income tax plan for Canada starting April 1, coupled with forgiveness of half of 1942's earned income tax, and higher taxes on liquor, tobacco, entertainment and postage, was announced tonight in a budget presented to the House of Commons by Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley.

Besides forgiving 50 per cent of the tax on 1942 earned individual income, the government also will forgive half the tax on investment income up to $3000, and defer until death half the tax on investment income for 1942 above $3000.

Effective At Once

Ilsley announced the pay-as-you-go plan and increases in other taxes as steps to boost revenue to help meet an estimated expenditure of $5,500,000,000 in the next fiscal year.

The new taxes become effective immediately, and the full pay-as-you-go deductions will begin April 1. Canada already makes some tax deductions at the source.

The Parliament will debate the proposals but approval will be virtually automatic. A vote against them under the Canadian system would be a vote of non-confidence in the government, and no such move is anticipated.

Work-and-Save Keynote

Ilsley estimated tax changes would increase revenue by 136 million dollars in the next fiscal year to a grand total of $2,752,200,000, but would still leave $2,748,000,000 to be raised by borrowing.

"Work and save" was the keynote of his message, and he urged the public to increase their savings and buy more bonds.

A new bill to combine the Ruml plan of tax abatement with a 20 per cent withholding collection was introduced in the House yesterday amid indications the measure might eventually be used to break the present Ways and Means Committee tie-up on pay-as-you-earn taxation.

The bill, presented by Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas, was a formal edition of a plan which had previously been rejected by the Ways and Means Committee by a vote reported as 15 to 10. It would establish pay-as-you-go taxation by forgiving one year of taxes for all individual payers, as proposed by Beardsley Ruml, New York economist. At the same time it would turn down quarterly collections, urged by Ruml, in favor of collecting at the source of income, indorsed by the Treasury.

Carlson's bill was submitted on the heels of a Ways and Means Subcommittee decision tentatively indorsing a 20 per cent withholding tax to be applied against wages and salaries starting July 1.

While both the Carlson and subcommittee collection proposals used the same percentage, it was apparent they would be applied in

The heaviest snowfall of the winter, reaching a depth of 6 to 10 inches for Washington and vicinity, was forecast by the Weather Bureau last night.

The forecaster said the snow would continue during the morning, diminishing in the afternoon. It was to be accompanied by winds reaching a velocity of about 20 miles an hour, with temperatures slightly below freezing.

Oakland, Calif., March 2.—A new work stoppage at a shipyard in nearby Alameda brought a demand from Vice Admiral John W. Greenslade today that C.I.O. Machinists' Local 1304 "reconsider" its action which he said he understood "penalized" members who carried on "vital war production."

A spokesman for the Twelfth Naval District said the stoppage of work "probably will delay trials of one minesweeper, built at the yard, and if it continues, will delay construction and completion of other minesweepers."

James Smith, union business agent, said the penalties were for "unbecoming conduct."

The admiral called on the union to carry out President Roosevelt's orders and said union action already had "delayed the sailing of an important convoy" last December.

Air Chief Reveals Plan to 'Destroy Japs on Own Soil'

By the Associated Press

New York, March 2.—Wide-scale bombing of Japan "to insure the total destruction of this enemy on his own soil" is the goal of the United States Army Air Force, Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, its chief, said tonight at a mass tribute meeting for Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

In his prepared address, Arnold said:

"Ultimately our serial operatives in the Pacific must call for—and we must be ready for wide-scale bombing of Japan itself—bombing of Japanese plane factories, rail centers, shipyards, munition dumps and docks, bombing day after day and night after night—bombing with complete and utter havoc, bombing to insure the total destruction of this enemy on his own soil!

"That, Mme. Chiang, is our goal."

General Arnold said he could not reveal "exactly what we are doing or will do for China," but warned that the task was far from simple. This country, he said, had no surplus of airplanes today, and to get goods into China men must fly them in over mountains higher than the Rockies.

He recounted the difficulties encountered due to weather conditions and the proximity of the enemy, adding:

"But our fliers are getting through, in ever increasing numbers and with ever increasing loads."

Gandhi Prepares To Conclude Fast Within Few Hours

Poona, India, March 2 (AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi was scheduled to end his 21-day hunger strike on schedule at 9 a. m. tomorrow (11:30 p. m., Eastern War Time, Tuesday) by drinking a glass of undiluted citrus juice.

No fanfare will accompany the breaking of the fast. Only members of Gandhi's family will be permitted to attend the thanksgiving prayer session to be held shortly before the fast ends.

In ordering quiet for the windup of the fast, the Government took a "back to normalcy" attitude.

Thus Gandhi again becomes a political prisoner, remaining in Aga Khan's Palace where he has been held since last August 9 when the All-India Congress Party began a civil disobedience campaign against British rule. No more will he be allowed visitors, as he has been during the past three weeks.

The government expects no new outbreak of trouble, immediately or later, as a result of the fast. An informant, asked if he saw any grounds for renewed peace negotiations with the congress, pointed out that the viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, already has stated that if the party's threat of opposition were withdrawn a new status for Gandhi would be considered.

Block Proposed House Air Group By 256 to 142 Vote

Paced by Speaker Rayburn, Administration forces in the House chalked up their first victory of the new Congress yesterday by a 256-to-142 roll-call vote that blocked establishment of a new standing committee on aviation.

Between the end of their aviation debate, and the final roll call, the members took time out for an air-raid test drill, and along with visitors and others, cleared the Capitol and went to shelter areas in nearby office buildings.

Martin Backs Measure

Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas warned against "changing horses in the middle of the stream," by taking aviation matters out of the committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and turning them over to the proposed new committee. "We have the best civil aviation on the face of the earth," said Rayburn. "Why change the rule at this time?"

Representative Martin of Massachusetts, House Republican leader and proponent of the new aviation committee, charged that the plan was opposed chiefly by "bureaucrats and standpatters."

Amendment Null

After the war, said Martin, it would be too late for Congress to take the lead in planning for post-war American air leadership. "Now is the time to get ready," he said.

London, March 2 (AP).—Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand announced today in a statement issued by the Dominions Office here that guards at a prisoner-of-war camp in New Zealand shot dead or fatally wounded 48 Japanese and wounded another 63 last Thursday.

He said the guards opened fire when the Japanese, armed with improvised weapons, attacked them.

Reds Renew Steady March Westward

Claim Successes In Kharkov, Donets Area, Caucasus

By the Associated Press

London, March 2.—The Red army, which has marched 400 miles in three months, continued to advance against the Germans on the three main fronts south of Moscow yesterday despite the mud of early spring thaws and despite reinforcements rushed from Holland to the front west of Kharkov.

The Moscow midnight communique told of continuing Soviet successes west of Kursk and Kharkov, in the upper Donets area, west of Rostov and in the Caucasus, although the Germans put up stiff resistance and obviously had slowed the Red army from the pace maintained in the opening months of the winter offensive.

Silent on Northwest

Of the northwestern front, where Marshal Semeon Timoshenko last week began an overpowering offensive which liberated 900 square miles of Soviet territory and captured 302 towns, the Soviet Information Bureau lapsed into a sudden silence which has become characteristic of its treatment of this vital sector.

The Germans rushed their 167th German Infantry Division from Holland to the front west of Kharkov and launched a series of counterattacks, the midnight bulletin said, but all attacks were beaten off by the Red army as it continued its offensive.

Large Place Taken

The Russians captured one large populated place after a battle in which 40 Germans were killed and three tanks and seven guns destroyed. Another populated place was taken after the Russians surrounded it and annihilated the German garrison.

Just to the north, west of Kursk, the Russians were declared to have captured a fortified position after demolishing a number of German blockhouses.

In addition to these advances in the Kursk and Kharkov areas, where they are pushing westward in the general direction of Konotop and Poltava, and toward Kiev beyond, the Russians captured several populated places in the Caucasus, wiped out infantry detachments in the Donets region southwest of Voroshilovgrad and repelled strong counterattacks west of Rostov," in some cases fighting "inside the German defenses."

Signal Trouble

Confusion Tinges Daylight Test Under New Air Raid Rules

Continuing unfamiliarity on the part of the public with the new air raid signals and the need of some prompt means of designating the "all clear" during the daytime were evident yesterday following the enlarged Metropolitan Area's first daylight tryout of the new signals. It was Washington's nineteenth test raid.

Acting United States Coordinator Guy Mason, who several days ago complained that in the recent night test many persons demonstrated an unawareness of what the two audible signals mean, made the same complaint last night following a tour which took him, during the test, to Alexandria and Clarendon in nearby Virginia.

The yellow signal was flashed to control centers at 2:05 p. m. The first blue sounded at 2:15, the red at 2:31, the second blue at 2:40, and the all-clear, a nonaudible signal, was communicated to wardens by the telephone "cascade" system at 2:46.

Mason said pedestrians were continuing to duck for shelter on the blue signal, a move which creates something of a traffic hazard during the daytime when cars are not required to slow down to 15

Mme. Chiang Visions World Of Future as One Great State

By the Associated Press

New York, March 2.—A future in which "this whole world must be thought of as one great state common to gods and men" was held out tonight by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek as the goal of the United Nations.

The wife of China's generalissimo, in an address in Madison Square Garden and broadcast over the C. B. S. and M. B. S. national hookups, also urged the necessity of forgiveness for the enemy because "there must be no bitterness in the reconstructed world."

Unsparing of her limited strength despite two near collapses yesterday, the petite wife of China's Generalissimo was greeted by 17,000 with tumultuous acclaim as she entered the Garden, escorted by an honor guard of "Flying Tigers," and took her seat on the speakers' stand where ranking officers of the military services, the Governors of nine Northeastern States and distinguished citizens awaited her.

The throng rose to its feet and applauded after she was introduced by Wendell L. Willkie, 1940 Republican Presidential candidate, as the "greatest" and "most fascinating" of world leaders here as an

Goebbels' Threat Of Raids Called Sop to Home Front

By International News Service

The latest blast by the Berlin radio threatening to bomb New York, Boston and Washington was regarded by authoritative circles here last night as another of Goebbels' attempts both to bolster German morale and shake American confidence.

OCD Director James M. Landis said the German people have been so hammered by Allied air raids that they are undoubtedly demanding reprisals against America.

"The enemy wants pictures of burning American cities to show his people," Landis said. "The enemy will strike wherever the element of surprise is in his favor. We must not assume that the three cities mentioned in today's broadcast are the only ones in danger."

Worker Draft Bill Seen as Disruptive

Committeemen Study Effect on Economic, Family Relationships

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday exhibited concern over the disruptive effect of compulsory warworker draft legislation upon labor-management relationship and the family and economic status of men and women who would be subject to provisions of the pending Austin-Wadsworth bill.

Committee Chairman Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina joined Senators O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming and Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts in developing these aspect of the bill during close examination of one of the measure's authors, Representative Wadsworth (Republican) of New York.

Wadsworth, together with former Senator Burke of Nebraska, coauthor with the New Yorker of the original Selective Service bill in 1940, pressed upon the committee their view that the need for legislative authority to draft warworkers has become urgent.

Wadsworth Accuses WMC

Wadsworth accused the War Manpower Commission of failing to organize to utilize voluntary methods of war labor control, much less "exhaust" such methods. He resumed his attack on McNutt's recent "work or fight" order as using the Selective Service Act to "club" workers into essential occupations contrary to the intention of Congress when the act was passed. Burke protested against the "clear effort" of McNutt to "pervert" the law.

"We cannot achieve orderly distribution of manpower by means of executive orders, directives, exhortations or threats," Wadsworth declared. "Confusion persists, and we shall never solve this problem . . . until the Congress of the United States legislates on the subject."

The pending bill, of which Senator Austin (Republican) of Vermont, is the coauthor, would provide for registration of all women between the ages of 18 and 50 and would make them subject, together with registered males not liable for military duty, to war service in event a Presidential call for volunteers should fail to produce adequate worker forces.

An amendment proposed by Austin would ive persons assigned to work under the bill the right to join labor unions, but stipulates that there shall be no obligation to join.

By questioning of Wadsworth, Senator O'Mahoney made it clear that, under the bill, nonunion workers could be assigned to industries operating under closed shop contracts, thus threatening to set aside existing labor contracts and making inoperable the War Labor Board's policy of preserving the status quo of labor-management relationships.

O'Mahoney observed that a man assigned to work on a farm must necessarily accept a lower wage than a man assigned to work in a war plant. But, he continued, men drafted for service in the Army are all paid on the same basis.

War Sidelights

Discovery Accelerates Night Vision

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—Discovery of a quick way of adapting eyes to darkness is aiding the Russian army in night battle and reconnaissance operations, a Soviet medical report related today.

Soviet physiologists are said to have developed methods which always result in maximum adaptation of the human eye to darkness within five or six minutes, instead of the 25 or 30 minutes usually required.

Krikor Kercheyev, Nikolai Derzhavin and Sergei Pilipchuk, all of Moscow, made this report in an article published by the American Medical Association.

The article said the result was not achieved by drugs, but merely by applying knowledge regarding the interaction of certain sensory nerves. Although the method was not described, it probably includes weak excitations of the sensory organs of hearing, taste or smell, which, they indicated, increases the sensitivity of other sense organs such as the eye.

'Gunner's Gadget'

Baltimore, March 2 (AP).—A little gadget which automatically prevents an aerial machine-gunner from shooting up his own plane at battle has been perfected by the Glenn L. Martin Co. and is now in use on American-built planes, the company announced today.

The device, invented by engineers, is about the size of a milk bottle and weights only a few pounds. The gunfire interruptor, nicknamed the "gunner's gadget," automatically shuts off the stream of bullets whenever the line of fire comes close to the wing, tail, rudder, stabilizer or other exposed parts of his craft.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, author of the resolution to set up the new committee, sought to avert defeat by an amendment to confine activities of the proposed group to civil and commercial aviation. The amendment won approval, 207 to 191, only to be nullified by the final vote.

In preparation for yesterday's test, Rayburn was understood to have called on the majority members to remain on the floor. "Absenteeism" on the floor, among Democratic members has been one cause of several Administration setbacks since the new Congress began, with the margin of power narrowed to the difference between 222 Democrats and 208 Republicans.

In addition, several Republicans in debate, and in the vote, jained in opposing the Martin-Nichols plan.

fining of others led to a half-day walkout yesterday by 34 men who said they were being punished by the union for having worked the Christmas weekend and declined to pay the fines. The number off work grew to an estimated 150 today.

Admiral Greenslade, commandant of the Twelfth Naval District and of the Western Sea Frontier, told the union in a letter today that it was his "understanding that the 28 men who worked (Christmas weekend) have been penalized by your union," for doing "just what the President of the United States (in a directive of January 1) censured your union for not doing—working as requested in conformity with the Pacific Coast zone standards as amended."

He charged that the machinists union "seriously imparied" vital war production December 20, 26 and 27, and "necessitated the President of the United States taking time from other matters of vital concern to every citizen to issue the directive."

The union had demanded overtime pay for the Christmas weekend and had instructed its members not to work under other conditions.

However, Smith, union business agent, said Young's suspension was ordered because he had advocated that other members withdraw from the union. He emphasized that neither the suspension nor the fines were connected with Christmas Week work.

Men Protest in Off Hours

San Diego, Calif., March 2 (AP).—Consolidated Aircraft Corp. reported Liberator bombers poured off its production lines today without interruption as worker-members of the A. F. of L. Machinists' Union attended a 24-hour demonstration meeting on off-shift hours.

The meeting opened at 12:30 a. m., after A. F. of L. union members completed a similar all-day session at the Boeing bomber plant in Seattle, Wash. The meeting was called here to protest what H. C. Brown, union president, termed "the long delay (by the War Labor Board) in settling inequalities in aircraft wage rates."

In Washington, the War Labor Board met all day yesterday on the aircraft wage dispute and was expected to start final voting this morning on a decision, with what was called a good chance the case will be completed today.—Editor's Note.)

Relating what he said was the possibility that 32 per cent of every worker's wages would go into taxes strating in July, Brown asserted there also should be a change in the pay envelope.

Dozens of workers told stories of dissatisfaction with present pay rates. Carl Mays, a union committeeman, said when business couldn't make a go of it because of insufficient income it closed its doors.

"That is what a lot of us will have to do," Mays said.

Soldiers, Beware!

Mme. Chiang Sees Vast World State

Asking, "What are we going to make of the future?" and "What will the revalescing world, recovering from this hideous blood letting, be like?" Mme. Chiang answered:

"The wisest minds in every corner of the world are pondering over these questions, and the wisest of all reserve their opinion. But, without letting temerity outrun discretion, I venture to say that certain things must be recognized. Never again must the dignity of man be outraged as it has been since the dawn of history.

"All nations, great and small, must have equal opportunity of development. Those who are stronger and more advanced should consider their strength as a trust to be used to help the weaker nations to fit themselves for full self-government and not to exploit them. Exploitation is spiritually as degrading to the exploiter as to the exploited.

"Then, too, there must be no bitterness in the reconstructed world. No matter what we have undergone and suffered, we must try to forgive those who injured us and remember only the lesson gained thereby.

"Finally, in order that this war may, indeed, be the war to end all wars in all ages, and that nations, great and small alike, may be allowed to live and let live in peace, security and freedom in the generations to come, cooperation in the true and highest sense of the word must be practiced. I have no doubt that the truly great leaders of the United Nations, those men with vision and forethought, are working toward the crystallization of this idea, yet they, too, would be impotent if you and I did not give our all toward making it a reality."

Let the United Nations, which have come together by choice, "resolve to create a world resting on the pillars of justice, co-existence, cooperation and mutual respect," she asked, and asserted:

"The goal of our common struggle at the conclusion of this war should be to shape the future so that this whole world must be thought of as one great state, common to gods and men."

Mme. Chiang thanked the people of America for their good will and affection, and expressed regret that her physicians would not permit her to accept all the invitations she received.

ently trying to reach their destination at Lae. Our losses are light. The battle continues."

From a standpoint of numbers of planes, the Japs made one of their heaviest raids of the war on Darwin, Australia, sending 15 against a single airdrome.

But the communique reported that intercepting Allied fighters shot down six of the invaders and that "damage was slight." It was a daylight raid, occurring at noon yesterday.

An Allied bomber exploded and sank an ammunition ship in the harbor of Wide Bay, New Britain, also damaging the jetty.

Fathers' Draft Due About May 1

tions in the effects of deferment policies with respect to agriculture and industry, extent of volunteering, and number of single men available. In Texas, married men with children have been inducted for some time, while in New York, large numbers of single men are still available.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, issued the following order to State Selective Service directors on August 29:

"Direct local boards that registrants having wives and children, or children with whom they maintain a bona-fide family relationship in their home, and providing the status with respect to such dependents was acquired prior to December 8, 1941, and at a time when the registrant's selection was not imminent, shall not be placed in Class 1-A, 1-A-0, or 4-E, until authorized by the director of Selective Service." (Classes 1-A-0 and 4-E are for conscientious objectors.)

This order is still on the books, although officials caution that it won't stay there long.

Under present regulations, married men with children would normally be called according to their order number, without regard to the number of children. However, it is expected that provision will be made to take fathers with fewer children first and to take care of "hardship" cases.

Executive Order Possible

It is believed that President Roosevelt could issue an executive order calling for the induction of married men with one child before married men with two children, or could provide for the induction of fathers in accordance with the age of the father or the age of the children.

Officials emphasize that schedules calling for the drafting of fathers are dependent upon a maintenance of present deferment practices with respect to industry and agriculture and sticking to the present decision on the size of the armed forces.

Unofficial estimates of ways the present pool of draft-age men is being used show that there are 11½ million persons available to expand the armed forces from the present level of six million to 11 million by the end of the year. Since 40 to 50 per cent of available men are expected to be rejected for physical or occupational reasons, only five and one-half million to seven million will be available to provide the additional five million men needed in the armed forces, not to count replacements.

The total manpower pool in the age limit is estimated at 22 million, but six million are already in the armed forces, one million have occupational deferments, one and one-half million are deferred as essential farm workers, and two million have been physically disqualified for military service, leaving a remainder of 11½ million to fill present needs.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, said he would file a minority report on the Bankhead bill and offer in its place an amendment to the Tydings amendment that would simplify the rules under which farm workers are deferred and make their deferment mandatory.

He said he had been working with the Department of Agriculture and Selective Service on such an amendment. Especially, he declared, did he object to the "freeze" portion of the Bankhead bill. "It is a farm freeze that puts agricultural workers into involuntary servitude," he declared.

Berlin Admits Heavy Damage in Record Raid

"Berlin never saw an attack like this one," the dispatch said.

The night attack was the sixth in a row in the nonstop aerial offensive concentrated on German holdings in preliminaries to an officially promised Allied invasion of Europe.

Around 900 tons of bombs were cascaded on Berlin, including two- and four-ton blockbusters—twice the weight of bombs dropped by the Germans on London in any single night of the 1940-41 raids.

Keeping up the 'round-the-clock offensive, R. A. F. plane's attacked targets in northern France and Belgium today and one squadron damaged 16 freight locomotives, canal barges, lock gates and railroad bridges.

A Canadian pilot of a Whirlwind said he circled the Bergues rail station for 10 minutes waiting for what he thought was a freight train to come out. It proved to be a passenger train and the passengers waved as he flew alongside. The pilot kept his bombs and went on to blow up a couple of trucks near Dunkerque.

Last night's attack was officially described as heavy and concentrated. Nineteen bombers were lost in this and subsidiary blows which served during the night to create a diversion of the German defenses from the main raid—on Berlin itself—at the end of the celebration of "Luftwaffe Day."

The Air Ministry News Service said the raid on Berlin began just after 10 p. m.

"Several tons of high explosives fell every minute and all the while incendiaries in the tens of thousands were dropping in a continuous shower," it said.

One pilot estimated more than 100 "first class" fires were set and the news service added that by 10:30 o'clock "thick smoke hung over the city in an ominous cloud reddened by the flames below."

Describing how the bombing beat the defenses, one aircraft captain declared, "It looked as though the attack was too much for them." And another said it seemed that a "distinct track was cut through the barrage as the result of the bombing."

Pilots asserted German fighters were up in great numbers along the route, but the flak over Berlin itself was lighter than it had been before. Veteran airmen said the fires there were hotter than any they had set before in Germany, Italy or France.

Capt. Harold Balfour, Undersecretary of State for Air, made it clear that the aerial softening-up process is definitely part of a pattern which will send the Allies into Europe.

"These are but the opening bars which will rise to the crescendo of a march on Europe," Balfour declared.

He thus gave the official promise of invasion less than a week after the chain of destruction was begun in nonstop procession.

Starting last Wednesday, the R. A. F. successively has raided Wilhelmshaven, Nurnberg, Cologne, various targets in western Germany, St. Nazaire and now Berlin—and this in addition to the American Fortress and Liberator raids during daylight.

Captain Balfour envisioned even greater aerial activity.

"I can look ahead to the time when there will be no hour of the day or night when the Axis can rest from the swoop of Allied aircraft," he said.

The scope of the Allied aerial offensive was accentuated by North African announcements which told of heavy British and American raids on the ports of Naples and Palermo, both of which figure in the overall plans for land attacks on Europe. One Axis fighter which opposed them, was shot down

The terrific attack on Berlin was concentrated into 31 minutes, by contrast with the dusk-to-dawn spread of the Germans' biggest raids on London, when they came over single file, and did not succeed in smashing the British defenses.

Great fields of fire were sown in the German capital. They set up a glow that could be seen for 200 miles across the face of otherwise darkened Europe.

Brig. Gen. L. H. Hedrick, judge advocate general of the United States forces in the European theater, helped interview the returning crews and said:

"I was impressed and I believe Hitler was even more impressed."

Lifting of Pleasure Driving Ban Considered by OPA for March 22

Brightening Gas Picture Leads to Review of Rules

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Lifting of the ban on pleasure driving by or on March 22 is being considered by OPA, it was learned yesterday, in view of a slightly brighter gasoline supply picture and the need for keeping automobiles in use to help ease transportation.

Although OPA officials declined to say more than that the subject was "under review," indications were that attention is directed at lifting the ban about the time the new gasoline ration period begins, March 22.

Coupon Value Stands

The move became probable following statements that the passing of winter is now making it possible again to build up stocks of gasoline more rapidly, and also because of a recent ODT assertion that private vehicles are essential to maintain needed civilian transportation.

The unit value of gasoline ration coupons, however, was expected to remain at three gallons, if the ban is lifted, or may be pared down to 2 gallons, as gasoline supplies are by means out of the critical stage.

Impetus to lifting of the pleasure ban also was expected to come from gasoline dealers who will probably seek relaxation of restrictions for survival reasons as stocks increase.

At the same time OPA and FWA issued a statement saying that elimination of unnecessary passenger car trips is saving the East Coast about 1,350,000 gallons of gasoline a day. This, it was pointed out, makes available tank cars and barge and tanker space for bringing gasoline and fuel oil into the East for essential purposes.

In another study of driving, OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown announced that mileage rationing has reduced the national average of American passenger cars to 5400 miles annually, without eliminating essential transportation.

"From the careful study of reports, it is apparent that we can reach the 5000-mile average for passenger cars this year," he declared. "With the continued cooperation of the public in avoiding all unnecessary driving, we can achieve the goal set by the Baruch committee."

The figures released by Brown reflect a mileage reduction achieved previous to the nonessential driving ban applied to the East Coast January 7.

Brown urged, however, that care to exclude unimportant driving should continue as "a few needless miles here and there would threaten our war effort by burning up tires now on wheels faster than they can be replaced."

10 Italian Divisions Quit Russian Front

By the Associated Press

London, March 2.—Part of the Italian army was reported tonight to have been called home from the Russian front as a surprise sequel to Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop's recent visit to Rome, where he is said to have demanded more Italians to fill gaps in the German ranks.

The Rome radio announced Premier Mussolini has ordered the withdrawal of the 10 divisions forming the Italian Eighth Army from the Russian front "to rest and have their ranks refilled."

Possible Explanations

Unofficial British sources gave three possible reasons for the withdrawal:

1. That Mussolini demanded it because of heightened fears of an imminent Allied invasion along his coastline.

2. That Italian divisions have been badly cut up in the Russian offensive.

3. That the battle-torn troops possibly were regarded as useless for anything except garrison duty and that both Hitler and Mussolini considered it necessary to have some troops with battle experience in Italy now that the country is directly threatened by Allied concentrations across the Mediterranean.

Mussolini admitted that the Italian troops had suffered "serious" losses in Russia, but cited Fascist forces who have had to face "extraordinary tests."

"You have given numerous decisive proofs of your tenacity and your courage in the heavy fighting shoulder to shoulder with the German and allied armies on the Soviet Russian front," the broadcast quoted Mussolini as telling his troops.

Soldiers Praised

"You have fought against numerically superior forces of the enemy to the limit of what is possible, and have dedicated the flag of your divisio with blood."

Resistance of Italian troops in the battle of Kharkov "constitutes a page of honor," the Berlin radio quoted Mussolini as saying.

"Deprivations, suffering and endless marching have put your physical and spiritual power of resistance to the extraordinary test," he declared. "Only with the high sense of duty and with the ever-present picture of the fatherland before your eyes could they be mastered.

"No less heavy were the losses which the fighting against bolshevism inflicted on you. But what was and what is at stake is to defend the 1000 years of European culture against the Muscovite barbarism."

Harrisonburg Pilot Killed in La. Crash

Lake Charles, La., March 2 (AP).—Two men were killed in the crash of a Lake Charles Army Air Base plane in Vermilion Bay on the Louisiana Coast last Thursday, the Public Relations officer of the air base announced today. Three others of the crew escaped.

The dead were Lieut. Roy H. Andes, pilot, Harrisonburg, Va., and Staff Sergt. Billy T. Davenport of Garber, Okla.

18 Girl Airline 'Expediters' Confer Here

Add to that wartime lexicon a new word in air travel—the "expediters." 18 girls who serve as trouble shooters for businessmen on the priority front, visible yesterday to impressed Statler Hotel guests as they trooped to and from a two-day meeting with Pennsylvania-Central Airline executives.

Their job, an innovation in the flying business, is to expedite shipment of men, materials and mail, and to serve as liaison agents between harassed firms and the equally harassed airline. And, because they have been at their tasks only a few months, the meeting is to acquaint them with company policy and iron out wrinkles in their scheme of coordination.

So they came from Detroit and Akron and Norfolk and all the other P.-C. A. cities, able for the first time to swap stories about experiences in the battle of time versus materiel.

"Pretty Vital Cogs"

"Sometimes we think we are pretty vital cogs in war industry," said red-haired Irene Zimmerman of Detroit. "Think how we feel when we are sending a priority No. 1 (highest priority of all) package that contains a tiny part for a submarine engine, waiting for it somewhere on the Coast."

Often, she added, 150 men in a war plant will be stranded without work if one vital piece of machinery fails to arrive on schedule. And the expediters, via telephone and teletype, make it their business to coordinate flights, hold planes, and principally to get there soon enough with the goods.

Miss Zimmerman, who, like most of the girls, is in her early 20s, gets unusual thrills from working in the heart of industrial Detroit. Sometimes an airplane factory, requiring machinery on split-second timing, will have its truck at the airport, engine running, so that one important unit may be whisked from a plane as soon as it lands, and right into action.

Typical of the expediters is blond Bettie Rae Bramlett of Akron, who served as a P.-C. A. hostess for almost a year before she became a traffic representative.

Most priority No. 1 labels go on cargo, not passengers, the girls will tell you. But once Miss Zimmerman used her expediting talents to save a life—when a doctor and his wife, never thinking to ask for priorities for nonwartime travel, set out via train for Miami. A friend knew that the wife was suffering from an incurable disease and was given about 30 days to live, although it was believed that time might be prolonged if she were taken to Puerto Rico in a more favorable climate.

Into action went the expediters. They arranged a top-ranking priority via Washington, intercepted the couple at Atlanta and sent them winging their way south in record time. But they never learned what happened.

Bulgaria to Send 4500 to Palestine

New York, March 2 (AP).—Great Britain has completed negotiations with the Bulgarian government for 4000 Jewish children and 500 adults to leave that country and go to Palestine, says Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States.

In a message last night to a stop-Hitler rally at Madison Square Garden, the British Ambassador described this action of his government as "a first step," and added that Britain "has also undertaken to receive in Palestine, if the necessary arrangements can be made, up to 29,000 Jewish children with a proportion of adults by March 31, 1944.

House Receives Bill Applying Anti-Racketeer Act to Unions

Legislation making labor unions subject to prosecution under the 1934 Antiracketeering Act, if they use violence to interfere with interstate commerce, was sent to the House by its Rules Committee yesterday probably to come up for a vote next week.

Meanwhile, Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, ranking majority member of the House Labor Committee, said he thought that group would order a general inquiry, probably next week, into the labor situation so that Congress would have "all available facts" regarding "strikes, absenteeism, wage demands and other factors concerning labor relations."

The Rules Committee's action on the antiracketeering bill represented a major victory for Representive Hobbs (Democrat), Alabama, the sponsor, who has been pressing for such legislation since last spring. A similar measure was approved last year by the House Judiciary Committee over strong opposition from union spokesmen, but the Rules Committee, which must clear major legislation to the House floor, never acted on it.

Chairman Sabath (Democrat) of Illinois said no roll call was taken yesterday, but that the voice vote in the Rules Committee was not unanimous. Previously, he had indicated personal opposition to the bill, saying labor is doing a fine job in the war effort and "this is no time to rock the boat."

The history of the Hobbs bill goes back to a Supreme Court decision a year ago on an action brought by the Justice Department against members of an A. F. of L. teamster local union in New York City. They were charged with requiring owners of trucks entering New York City from out of the State to pay a union member to drive and unload the trucks within the city. There were allegations of threats of violence and acceptance of payments without doing any work.

In a 6-to-1 decision, the Court held that a clause in the law exempting ordinary activities of labor unions prevented prosecution under the statute. Chief Justice Stone was the dissenter with Justice James F. Byrnes, now the economic stabilization director, delivering the majority opinion.

Hobbs said his bill was not aimed at labor, but at "anyone who unlawfully interferes with interstate commerce whether he carries a union card or not."

Both the A. F. L. and C. I. O. oppose the measure. In a letter to the Rules Committee, President Philip Murray of the C. I. O. contended the bill "poses as a curb on racketeering, but the simple truth is its authors seek merely to eliminate present language protecting legitimate labor activities and to insert language such as has been used by antilabo courts in decades past to outlaw the very existence of organizations of working men and women."

Convictions under the Hobbs bill would be punishable by up to $10,000 fine and 20 years' imprisonment.

Mutual Aid Pact Between U. S. And Chile Signed

The United States and Chile yesterday signed a mutual aid pact.

Although the text of the agreement is secret, the State Department disclosed that under its terms the American Government considers the defense of Chile as vital to the defense of the United States and would aid Chile in the event that country was attacked.

The pact was negotiated under the authority of the Lend-Lease Act and was signed at the State Department by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles and Don Rodolfo Michels, Chilean Ambassador to the United States.

The conclusion of the agreement followed by only a few hours reports from Chile that President Juan Antonio Rios would shortly pay the previously postponed visit to this country.

Pay-as-You-Go Tax Plan Announced in Canada and reduction of liability on investment income taxes, Ilsley said, will mean that higher deductions will be made from incomes at the source to achieve a more complete pay-as-you-go effect, with the objective 95 per cent of tax liability on 1943 incomes.

Deductions already made in 1943 will be applied to the 1943 income and final adjustment of the 1942 tax will be covered by returns to be filed not later than June 30.

Numerous Increases

The tax on liquor was increased $2 a gallon, with the provinces perhaps adding nother $2 tax; cigarette and cigar taxes are hiked; postal rates are increased by 1 cent on all letters except those to overseas service personnel, and entertainment taxes in night clubs are increased from 20 to 25 per cent.

Ilsley waned that the government had been forced to borrow too heavily from banks to meet its 1942-43 war deficit of $2,252,000,000, and urged Canadians to increase savings which could be placed in the "service of the nation."

He expressed satisfaction with most phases of Canada's financial record during the year which ends March 31, but said the proportion of total subscriptions which had been purchased by individuals fell off in the third victory loan.

Confusion Tinges Air-Raid Test

miles per hour, as at night. More training on the meaning of the signals, by press, radio and additional tests, is needed, he said.

H. N. Stull, executive assistant to Chief Air Raid Warden William J. Mileham, said the test generally was "very good," but he found the "cascade" system of notifying wardens of the all-clear "very slow and unsatisfactory."

Mason Stopped Three Times

"We wanted a certain time limit following the second blue signal to designate the all clear," he said, "but the Army wouldn't agree. Maybe the public can produce some suggestion which will improve our present plan—I certainly hope so."

He said early reports from wardens indicated that several streetcars failed to discharge their passengers on the red signal as required, but he attributed this partially to lack of shelters.

Porter Lumpkins, acting director of the Department of Civilian Defense, mentioned seeing an unloaded streetcar during a tour of the downtown area, but said, generally, the test was "very good."

Commissioner Mason found valid reason for bringing the 15-mile speed limit in Alexandria and Arlington into conformity with metropolitan regulations which do not require that automobile traffic reduce its speed on the blue signal in the daytime. Traveling from Clarendon to Alexandria, the acting coordinator was stopped three times by auxiliary policemen, he later told reporters.

He was allowed to proceed after identifying himself, but one of the auxiliaries complained, Mason said, that "you might be in an emergency, but not that much of one."

Bolling Field Group Moves to Milwaukee

Milwaukee, March 2 (INS).—General Mitchell Field, Milwaukee's airport, today became headquarters base for an Army Air Transport Command group transferred from Bolling Field, Washington, D. C.

Two planes bearing Maj. James Jones, executive officer of the group, and seven other officers were the first of the transport command unit to arrive in this city. More planes are to arrive tomorrow, Major Jones added, and several squadrons of officers and men ultimately will be stationed at the field.

IN NO OTHER LAND IS THE PRICE OF Freedom SO SMALL

MARK MONDAY, MARCH 15th, as the day of another American Thanksgiving. That we who remain in this nation may give dollars in place of our own lives to hold our freedom secure. That we shall not walk through bomb-torn streets. Nor sleep beneath hell-infested skies. Nor search in the ruins of a home for those who paid a higher price.

IN ALL THE WORLD of nations—we are among the fortunate few. For on our bill for freedom—there are no devastated cities. No bodies thinned with hunger. No backs red from the cut of the lash. We pay . . . with dollars—that these things shall not come here—dollars, out of the abundance that only this nation has bestowed upon its people. And the amount on which we pay no tax is bigger than the income of any but the wealthy in other countries.

WE ARE PRIVILEGED to pay—and to work and earn and have what others of the earth only dream of having. Our wage scales are the highest in the world. Our opportunities the richest. Our comforts—with all of war's restrictions—the greatest. Our sacrifices—the least.

OUR SONS OUT THERE—where freedom is a distant thing—a hope . . . a dream of millions now enslaved . . . they know its fabulous price in homes and lands and industries laid waste. They know the security and safety that is ours—and how pitifully small the price we're asked to pay . . . in dollars.

MARCH 15TH. Mark it as a day of grateful thanks. For the privilege of paying so small a price for the right to live in safety . . . to know the love of children and the peaceful sanctuary of home . . . to worship God without fear . . . to think your own thoughts, unafraid—speak your own mind, unchallenged—do the work of your own choosing—and enjoy, for yourself and your family, the fair rewards of your labor.

AND GIVE THANKS TO GOD that we live in the only nation on earth where the price of freedom is so small.

U. S. Subs Sink 5 Jap Ships and Damage 2

Possibility of Invasion of Australia Not Overlooked in Convoy Speculation

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

American submarines have sunk five Japanese ships and damaged two others in recent forays against enemy supply lines in the western Pacific, the Navy announced yesterday.

This latest report of the activities of America's undersea fleet was given as military and naval men watched closely the Nipponese movements in the Southwest Pacific.

Officials here said they had no information regarding the enemy convoy reported headed for New Guinea beyond that announced by General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia, but expressed the opinion that it carried troops and supplies for existing Jap bases on the northern coast of that huge island.

Allied air attacks and the recent ground fighting around Mubo and Wau have considerably weakened the enemy in the Salamaue-Lae area of New Guinea and military men believe the Japs desire to entrench themselves more strongly at Madang and other bases farther west on New Guinea's northern coast.

The current heavy weather in the area—grounding planes—provided the enemy with an excellent opportunity to strengthen their positions without running into devastating Allied air attacks.

If this is the objective of the enemy convoy, it would be simply a part of the recent Japanese move to reinforce their outer barrier of bases in the Southwest Pacific, probably against an anticipated Allied offensive.

It is, of course, possible that the Japs themselves are planning an invasion of northern Australia or some other offensive, but the present convoy—14 war and supply vessels—is too small for any such undertaking.

The Navy announcement of seven more Japanese ships torpedoed raised the total "bag" of our Pacific submarine force to 191 enemy vessels. The toll included 133 Jap vessels sunk, 23 probably sunk and 35 damaged.

Time or place of the latest sinkings was not disclosed. It is probable, however, that they were prior to the recent Jap reinforcement movements, as reports of such actions are normally delayed somewhat.

The enemy ships listed as sunk in yesterday's communique were: Three medium-sized cargo ships, one medium-sized tanker and a small schooner. Damaged were a transport and a tanker, both of medium size.

Earlier in the day, Secretary of the Navy Knox had something to say on submarine warfare on the other side of the world—the Allied campaign against Axis U-boats.

He said there has bene no indication of any material increase in the number of German submarines operating in the Atlantic, but added that this didn't mean the force couldn't be enlarged. The Nazis, he said, have at least 300 to 400 U-boats and can keep about a third of them in action at a time.

The Navy chief also questioned whether the heavy air attacks on German submarine bases in northern France were doing any direct damage to the U-boats undergoing overhaul there between cruises.

He said the "block-buster" bombs dropped on St. Nazaire and Loirent undoubtedly do damage to the communities and disrupt operations at the bases, but added that the submarines themselves are pretty well protected against direct hits in heavy concrete shelters.

Asked to comment on reports from Switzerland that the Nazis were trying to force the Italian to put German officers on Il Duce's warships, Knox said that such a move would create "difficulties." Then he added:

"The trouble with the Italian is that while he has been a good fighter in causes in which he believes and where his interest and patriotism were involved, he has no heart in this war."

During the day, the Navy issued a communique on aerial operations in the Solomons March 1. It told of an attack by American Dauntless dive-bombers, escorted by Wildcat fighters, on the Jap base at Munda, in the middle Solomons. Fires were started by the American bombs and all of our planes returned, it was said.

Move to Repeal $25,000 Ceiling on Salaries Faces Test in House Rules Committee Today

A preliminary showdown on legislation to repeal the President's $25,000 ceiling (after taxes) on salaries while boosting the national debt limit from 125 to 210 billion dollars was scheduled for today before the House Rules Committee, as Speaker Rayburn announced that the bill would come to a floor test late next week.

Rules Chairman Sabath (Democrat) of Illinois, announced that Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma, author of the salary repealer, as well as opponents of the measure, would be heard today.

At the same time, Sabath voiced his own opposition to the salary limit repealer, declaring it was an attempt to hamper and harass the President during the war.

Asked about the salary repealer, Sabath declared that the Republicans and "five or six on our side" were making a "political issue of it," and he added that "the country is beginning to resent it."

Foes of the Administration, said Sabath, "want to mbarrass the President and keep him busy on a lot of nonessential matters instead of letting him keep his mind free on the task of winning the war."

Disney's plan won a 15-to-10 vote of support from the Ways and Means Committee.

Besides repealing the President's order, Disney's plan would establish this Congressional salary-control formula:

1. Salaries above $67,200 gross —the amount calculated to leave $25,000 net after taxes—would be allowed to continue at their level as of December 7, 1941, but would not be allowed to rise.

2. Salaries under $25,000 net would be allowed to rise to that figure, but not above it, provided the increases were reasonable, and subject to the authority of the Treasury to disallow "unreasonable" increases in passing on corporate tax returns.

Roll Call Vote Sought

After this plan cleared the committee, President Roosevelt wrote Ways and Means Chairman Doughton, offering to withdraw the salary order, if Congress would establish a wartime super tax on all income over $25,000 for single persons, and over $50,000 for married persons.

Administration strategists in the House were said to be concerned over the chance that the Disney bill could go through without a record vote, and to be seeking some method to insure a formal roll call. Normally such a bill would be taken up by the House acting as a "committee of the whole" where a roll call would not be in order. A special rule to avoid this situation was being urged by some members.

Detroit's Willow Run Area Is a Housing Nightmare . . .

Picture Story of Living Conditions Near Bomber Plant

Dormitories for Single Men—Hovels For Children

By Agnes E. Meyer

Detroit, March 2.—How much do we really care what happens to human beings as a result of our pell mell, do or die war effort? How much do we care about the effect upon children who throughout our country are bearing the brunt of this social upheaval? After studying the Willow Run area, it seems to me the Federal Government will have to do something about the living conditions throughout this section of Wayne County, Mich., or its orators will have to stop talking about the dignity of man.

As all the world knows, this is the site of the 67-acre Ford plant where the bombers are beginning to roll off the assembly lines in satisfactory numbers after two years of tribulations. The wonder is it did not take 10 years just to build the factory, so overwhelming are its dimensions and the massiveness of its installations. It was placed in this flat expanse, 20 miles out of Detroit, because no other space large enough for the enormous building and the airfield, with its long runways, could be found anywhere else. At the time it was planned it seemed easily accessible to an inexhaustible supply of manpower from nearby Detroit, Ann Arbor and half a dozen other cities or towns of good-sized populations. The problem of transportation appeared to be solved when the State of Michigan built fine cement highways converging from every direction upon this central point.

Gas, Rubber Shortages

But the gas and rubber shortage transformed the distances, however numerous and perfect the highways. In addition, Detroit's housing shortage soon made life very uncomfortable to the multitudes that streamed into that city from every direction. Before long the small cities nearer to the plant, such as Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti and Wayne, were overwhelmed by a human flood. It overflowed into the adjacent villages where trailers settled down in each yard. It spread over the empty countryside where the townships had no legal controls. A disorderly array of trailer settlements, in twos and threes or by the dozen squatted wherever and for as long as they pleased.

A no-man's-land sprang up, a nightmare of sub-standard living conditions, for which nobody is to blame, but which have possibilities of disaster not only to the immediate occupants, but to the inhabitants of the Federal Housing projects, to the adjacent cities and to the great metropolis of Detroit as well.

Grave Epidemic Hazard

Take as an example that repeats itself in six areas between Ypsilanti and the bomber plant, a community called the Lay Garden Subdivision. It consists of 200 small frame houses having no sewer or water system. Each house has a well and a privy in the back yard whose proximity was dangerous enough when each house was used by one family. Today I saw one of these houses in which the original family of five live on the first floor, five men sleep in the basement, four on the second floor, nine in the garage, while four crowded trailers are parked in the back yard. The ground is flat, badly drained, covered with refuse whose filth mingled with stagnant water, seeps rapidly into the ground around the well. Increasing the load on the poorly constructed well causes it to draw water for an ever-greater expanse of these polluted areas.

Just behind the privy in one of these backyards, (as the accompanying photograph will prove) is a sign, "U. S. Government Property, Keep Out." A stone's throw from this disgraceful mess are the magnificent new dormitories built by the FPHA, capacity 3000. Does our Government think that the disease germs hatched this spring at the very doors of this dormitory will respect its injunction? Has it the right to place 3000 workers in such peril? It has built water and sewer systems for Warren Township in the next county, why not for this congested district where an epidemic would close down one of the most important bomber plants in the whole country, to say nothing of the havoc it would play in the nearby Army camps, in the large Ferry Command at the Wayne County Airport, in the townships and cities which cannot cope with the peril to which they are exposed.

Ypsilanti Did Utmost

The City of Ypsilanti has done its utmost to defend its health conditions. So public spirited are its citizens that they voted a bond issue of $136,000 for a new hospital a year ago, when overcrowding by war-workers swamped its 25-bed institution. As 10 doctors and eight dentists are now serving 45,000 people in this area, adequate hospital facilities, they reasoned, would be one line of defense against disaster. They are still waiting for priorities on the materials. Thus do our Federal authorities encourage local initiative.

The U. S. Public Health Service has seen to it that the community got an extra dentist, but nowhere can it supply doctors as fast as the Army takes them out. Washtenaw County which comprises most of the worst trailer squatters, also set up a local health department under Otto K. Engelke, a young doctor whose courage, persistent efforts and humor in the face of endless work, make one hopeful about America. But his small staff, one sanitary engineer and three nurses, cannot possibly cope with major problems such as sewerage or even with the surface dangers of these sprawling and constantly shifting gypsy-like encampments that have no sanitary facilities at all.

What happens to the children in such an environment? The beautiful dormitories are for single persons, and stand practically empty because the young men have been largely drafted and young women have not yet been admitted. Just being completed by the FPHA are 500 trailer apartments and 2500 family units which will take some pressure off the nearby communities. But these facilities will not change the fundamental conditions which are a menace to childhood, the basement homes or cellars where families live like animals, in the damp and darkness, the tents where they almost froze to death, the filthy trailer settlements, where children play with stray dogs among the refuse heaps.

Schools Overcrowded

Many of these families are too far away to send their children to school, but even if buses could be found, the schools at Inkster, Wayne and other small villages already have two or three sessions daily of three hours each. In Ypsilanti, although there are no double sessions, there is overcrowding of 170 per cent. A new school of six rooms was constructed in the township which was immediately filled with over 400 pupils. Even with the best teaching, education under such conditions is a farce. In Inkster the stove in the colored school was defective and it had to be closed during cold weather. The truancy rate in some districts has gone up 300 per cent. There are no recreational facilities in this area either for children or adults, often not even a movie easily accessible. By some irony of fate the only recreation building, at the FPHA dormitories burnt down last week. The dreariness of existence, the lack of adequate school facilities, is increasing delinquency among the young, and having its inevitable effects upon the adult population as well.

The lack of privacy when families and boarders live huddled together without decent accommodations is one of the worst aspects of the whole situation. The moral problems, arising out of these living conditions, out of the share-the-ride movement, from the constant readjustment of sleeping habits and the employment of women in factories, are so serious that the police, the welfare organizations, and the employers are all harassed by the tragic results. One leading motor company was shaken recently out of its solemnity and dignified calm when one worker shot his wife because she showed a marked preference for the good manners of her foreman. But as long as drink and sex are the only readily available forms of diversion, the Nation will have to suffer the consequences until it realizes that it has a profound responsibility for the well-being of the transferred worker. "One C. I. O. union leader said to me: "It will take us three generations to get over the effects of Willow Run."

Local Self-Help

The Willow Run Community Council, supported by the cities mainly involved, Detroit, Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, and Local 50 of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., is struggling intelligently with the overwhelming difficulties of health, land use, education and recreation. The union has just secured 50 old WPA tool sheds which will be set up in groups of four as recreation halls. The warworkers are setting them up, wiring them, and contributing the money for furnishings. In other words, local officials and citizens are not taking the situation lying down, but doing what they can to help themselves. But the old-established centers of population are handicapped by the fact that the townships have no real authority over the no-man's land of trailerdom.

I asked one of the natives of Ypsilanti if there was great resentment against Mr. Ford because of the crowding of homes and schools and the general upheaval in their staid old community. To my surprise he replied, "Nope, we ain't mad at Henry for this mess. None of us could see what was goin' to happen. We fought the first housing projects a lot more than he did, 'cause we thought they weren't needed." He also told me that the whole town felt very loyal to "Henry" because he had given the townspeople work for years past in the small factories that he scattered over the countryside for just that purpose.

Family Unit Need Urgent

What is the answer to the whole situation? The Detroit Fact-Finding Committee on Defense Housing has recommended a minimum of 10,000 family units for immediate needs, together with all the necessary community facilities for education, health and recreation. The family unit is the greatest need, the dormitory never having had more than 600 applications for its 3000 rooms. As so many of these nomadic workers are irretrievably trailer-minded, the United States Public Health Service, which has studied the whole area with its usual care, recommends licensed trailer communities with adequate sanitary provisions and supervision.

But everyone is agreed that the health menace in the unimproved districts is the greatest threat not only to these families and their children but to all the workers at the bomber plant, to the occupants of the FPHA housing projects and to the soldiers stationed nearby. The Michigan Avenue area is the general region of acute difficulty, but it reaches over into Wayne County, to Dearborn, Highland Park and Detroit. Dr. Engelke, director of Washtenaw County Health Department, said to me: "The original causes of these conditions will have to be ignored now. The usual slow methods of progress in civic improvement simply won't do, if trouble is to be prevented."

The pocket areas of possible infection scattered around the dormitory site in six separate groups, cannot bond themselves for water systems, sewers and garbage disposal facilities for a population of abnormal proportions. Such improvements are costly now, nor can they be made without an immediate grant of priorities.

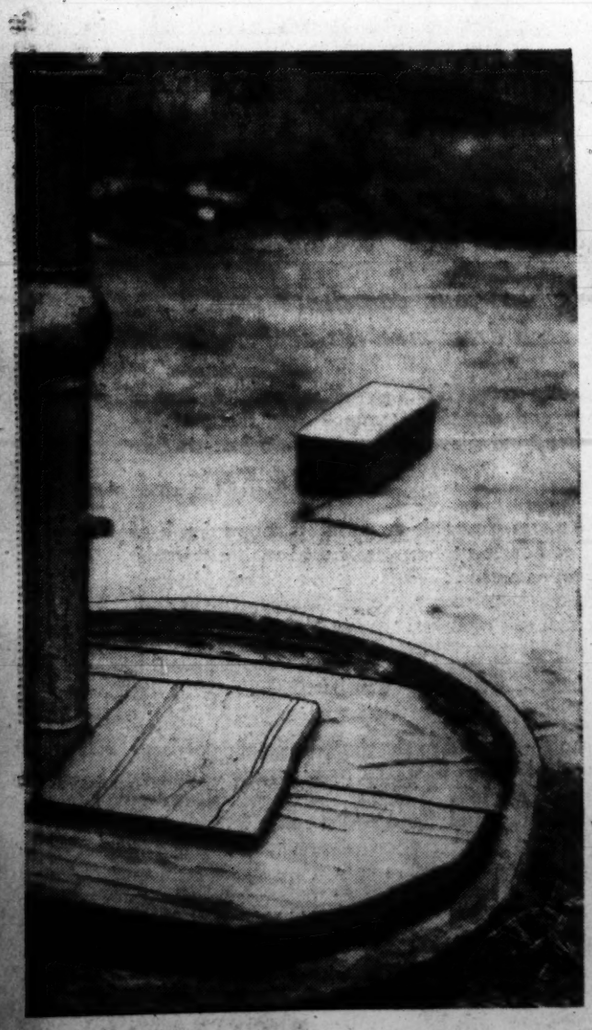
The moral degeneration of people exposed to such inhuman conditions is reason enough to change them. But an outbreak of typhoid or some other epidemic would spread far beyond the point of infection and might cripple the war effort of the whole Detroit area. If Uncle Sam wants to prevent trouble, he must act quickly and take remedial steps before it is once more—too late.

Friday Edsel Ford will tell his own story of the bomber plant, how its site was selected, why it had so many difficulties to overcome and some of the effects of the war impact upon the traditions of this industrial principality.

1. IN ONE COMMUNITY each house has a privy in the back yard. Drinking water is drawn from shallow wells in areas like this.

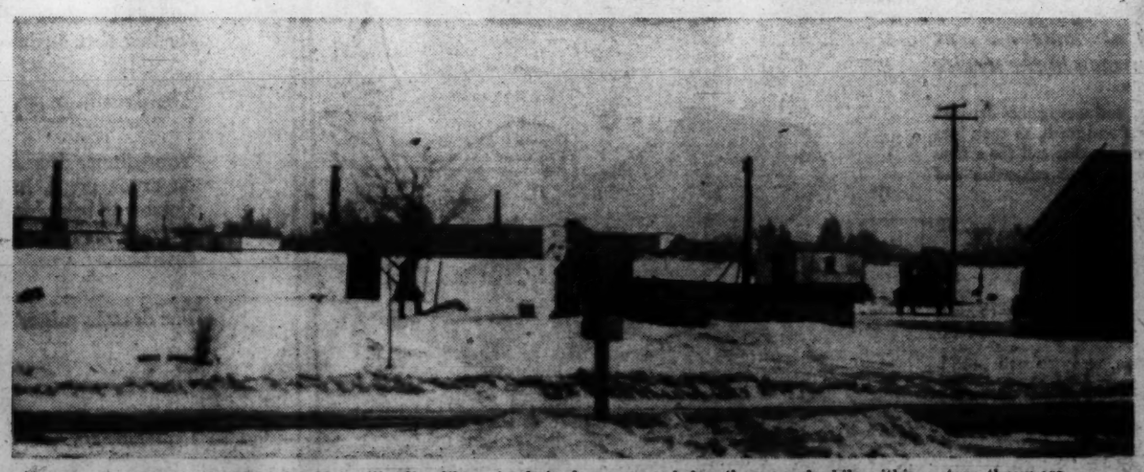
2. GARBAGE AND REFUSE strewn on the ground in the Willow Run area subdivision adds to the unsanitary conditions.

3. CHILDREN of war workers play in the squalid back yards. Existing conditions are a menace to their health.



4. WELLS WITH SPLIT PLATFORMS like this are drilled in the badly-drained, filth-covered ground. They provide the only source of water.

5. THIS IS A HOMESITE—not a flood scene—for war workers. There are 200 similar frame dwellings within a subdivision which has five sequels in the areas between Ypsilanti and the Willow Run bomber plant



6. IN BASEMENT HOMES families live like animals in damp rooms below the ground while within a stone throw are the new FPHA dormitories (background). The dorms, with a capacity for 3000, are for single persons only.

7. A TENT is "home" for more than one war worker. Canvas top and sides provide little or no protection from winter's cold.

8. IN THE COMMUNITY families live huddled together. There is little privacy, no decent accommodations.

Hundreds Donate Blood At War College

An intensive campaign for recruits to the District Red Cross Blood Donor Center yesterday attracted 160 civilian and military personnel of the Army War College, where a mobile unit of the Red Cross set up facilities for the opening of a three-day session of blood-giving in the recreation hall.

The equipment also will be at the War College today and Friday from 9 a. m. until about 3 p. m., and a total of 500 donors is expected.

Meanwhile, students from Holton-Arms School, jumping the gun on the $1,555,400 drive for the local Red Cross war fund which opens in the metropolitan area tomorrow, yesterday contributed $400 to the District chapter. The Nation-wide drive for 125 million dollars opened Monday.

In addition to cash, Holton-Arms girls also gave to the Junior Red Cross 8000 metal coat hangers to be turned over to the Army and Navy. Each serviceman needs five hangers, meaning that the Holton-Arms gift will supply 1600 men.

The Junior Red Cross simultaneously issued an appeal for tin cans to be used as cold cream containers for Red Cross women sent overseas for duty with the armed forces. Standard equipment for such workers includes cold cream or lanolin that is not subject to the effects of the weather, so that coffee, biscuit and tobacco cans are needed for packing purposes. They may be sent to the Junior Red Cross at 2020 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, where they will be cleaned and painted by youthful workers.

Meanwhile, Richard F. Allen, vice chairman of insular and foreign operations for the Red Cross, returned from a 10-week survey of Red Cross activities in North Africa to paint a vivid picture of aid given weary soldiers and undernourished children in that area.

"Red Cross clubs and recreation facilities in 18 cities in Algeria and Morocco and in 8 cities in Libya, Egypt and other sections of the Far East are serving the needs of American troops," Allen reported.

Requests of soldiers returning from battle fronts follow an almost identical pattern, he said. The first is for a cup of American coffee then a call for a place to bathe, then for a razor.

Canadians Urged To Inrease Savings

Ottawa, March 2 (AP).—Finance Minister James Ilsley said tonight the Government had been forced to borrow too heavily from banks to meet its 1942-43 war deficit of $2,262,000,000, and urged the Canadians to increase savings which could be placed in the "service of the nation."

Zionists Win Award for Bond Sales

The Zionist Organization of America, in ceremonies yesterday at its national headquarters here, was awarded the Treasury Department's "No. 1" citation for "distinguished services rendered in behalf of the war savings program."

Judge Morris Rothenberg of New York City, chairman of the Zionists' national war effort committee, accepted the award on behalf of the organization from William C. FitzGibbons, special assistant to Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., in the presence of Zionist officials and others.

Secretary Morgenthau sent a telegram to Judge Rothenberg, praising the Zionists' achievements during Zionist War Bond Month.

Announcing war bond sales by members of the organization during February aggregating more than $10,297,000, Judge Rothenberg, in accepting the award, declared "that as Americans and as Zionists we are happy to have rendered this service. . . . I feel that the achievements of the Zionist members in the sale of close to $10,300,000 in war bonds is a great tribute to the energy, enthusiasm and loyalty of American Zionists and will resound to the prestige of the American Zionist movement."

Giraud Sailors Quit To Join De Gaulle

New York, March 2 (AP).—For the past week and a half sailors from the Richelieu, Le Fantasque and other French warships in American ports have been leaving their vessels at the rate of 14 a day to sign up with the De Gaullist Fighting French forces, says Bernard Cherau, an official of the Fighting French legation.

'Red Book' Boosts Auto Fees

Even though their cars are one year older than when they last paid taxes on them, District motorists are paying a heavier personal property levy on the vehciles this year than they did in 1942—and the tax rate hasn't been increased.

This seeming paradox is due indirectly to the war and directly to the demand for used cars which has sent prices spiraling upward since automobile production was stopped after the outbreak of hostilities.

The District tax—$1.75 per $100 assessed valuation—is levied against the cash value of the car, as determined by the standard used car "red book," plus a flat 15 per cent.

And "red book" values this year, as they did last year, have increased to a point where the average assessment value of the low-priced, popular make of car has been hiked approximately $50 in the District, with a corresponding average increase in taxes of 87 cents.

There isn't a great deal, of course, but even so there have been complaints, the District tax collector's office reported yesterday. However, there are complaints every year, and the "squawks" currently haven't exceeded 1942's, they said.

What effect this increased assessment value will have on personal property revenues derived from automobiles—last year the yield approximated $1,200,000—remains to be seen.

Too many intangible factors—the number of car owners who have left the District, the number of out-of-State motorists who will buy tags here this year, the number of motorists who will lay their cars up for the duration of the rubber and gas situation—enter into the picture to make even a rough estimate anything but an extremely hazardous venture, it was said.

Action Against Miller Dropped

Henry Miller, a Washington restaurant owner and a native of Germany, was exonerated Monday of making false statements when he took his oath of citizenship, when the United States district attorney's office here dropped denaturalization charges against him on direction of the Department of Justice.

In October, 1940, the Department of Justice filed the denaturalization suit against Miller, owner of the Old Dutch Inn, 1202 North Capitol Street, and charged that Miller did not renounce his allegiance to the German Reich as he is required to do under the naturalization laws.

The case was originally set for trial yesterday but just before trial the suit was dismissed by the Government "without prejudice."

The district attorney's office termed the case the first of its kind ever to come up in the District involving the denaturalization of a person accused of allegiance with an enemy power.

Woman Admits She Broke Baby's Arms

Seattle, March 2 (AP).—Detective Capt. Marshall Scrafford said Mrs. Ardis Farrington, 23, confessed yesterday she broke both arms of 9-month-old Mary Jean Clairmont. The baby died in a hospital last week.

Scrafford said Mrs. Farrington confessed to Policewoman Helen Elliott, after long questioning by Scrafford and Deputy Coroner John P. Brill. The baby and a three-year-old brother—children of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace J. Clairmont, were left with the Farringtons while the Clairmonts went house hunting.

Point Ration Shopping Hints

Our Government, newspapers, radio stations and your Safeway Store are all doing everything they can to make sure you know how to shop under point rationing . . . the plan designed to make sure that everybody gets his fair share of the food available. You can do your part to make the new ration plan work smoothly by keeping in mind the simple rules listed below before you shop for the first time under point rationing.

KNOW that:

(1) Point values have nothing to do with dollars-and-cents prices. You have to give the money price and the point stamp price for every purchase in a rationed group.

(2) You have freedom of choice in using your points to buy any rationed item, provided it is available.

(3) If you buy foods with a low point value you will be able to buy more of the articles in the same rationed group.

(4) Point values of all rationed foods are set by the Government and not by the storekeeper or by the manufacturer.

(5) You are not permitted to buy point rationed items, at any store, without giving point stamps . . . even on a charge account.

(6) High point stamps should be used when buying a number of rationed items at one time. Conserve your low point stamps as storekeepers cannot give you ration stamps in change.

(7) Loose stamps are not valid. Stamps must be torn out of your ration book at the time of purchase and in the presence of your grocer.

Now When You Go Shopping . . .

REMEMBER to:

(1) Allow plenty of time for your shopping under point rationing . . . it takes longer. Best time to shop is early in the week and early in the day.

(2) Be sure and take your War Ration Book No. 2 with you. No stamps . . . no rationed items.

(3) Take your point value chart along with you, too, for convenience. While our store will have price and point values clearly marked on the shelves and on the merchandise, your list will serve as a double check and save lots of extra steps and confusion.

AND

You'll enjoy shopping at your Safeway Store because you can take all the time you want without embarrassment or a sense of feeling hurried. Since you are waiting on yourself, no one cares how many times you change your mind or exchange one can for another before you reach the check-out stand.

BUT

If you do want help . . . if some point is not clear . . . we have a specially trained clerk in each store, wearing a badge that reads "Information", to help you. It's his job to answer your questions cheerfully and in detail. So, don't hesitate to ask him your questions.

POINTERS ON POINT RATIONING

I DON'T UNDERSTAND THIS POINT RATIONING AT ALL. MAYBE I'D BETTER NOT GO SHOPPING WITH YOU UNTIL I FIND OUT MORE ABOUT IT.
I'M A LITTLE CONFUSED TOO, BUT THEY SAY SAFEWAY HAS MADE IT EASY. PUT ON YOUR COAT AND LET'S GO SEE.
THEY HAVE DONE A LOT TO HELP US. DID YOU NOTICE THOSE GOVERNMENT SIGNS, AND THERE'S A MAN ANSWERING QUESTIONS OVER THERE.
IT DOES BEGIN TO LOOK EASIER, ALL RIGHT. LOOK AT THE SHELF MARKERS. THEY GIVE POINT COST AS WELL AS THE PRICE. LET'S READ THE SIGNS, LOOK AROUND A LITTLE MORE, AND THEN ASK THE MAN OUR QUESTIONS.
WE THINK WE KNOW HOW TO SHOP UNDER POINT RATIONING, EXCEPT FOR A FEW THINGS. EVERYTHING IS CLEAR. MAY WE ASK YOU SOME QUESTIONS?
I'LL BE HAPPY TO ANSWER YOUR QUESTIONS. AND IF ANYTHING SHOULD BOTHER YOU LATER, DON'T HESITATE TO ASK ME. THAT'S WHY I'M HERE, LADIES.
POINT RATION SHOPPING ISN'T SO HARD. I WAS WORRIED AT FIRST, BUT THAT INFORMATION MAN SOLVED MY PROBLEMS. SAFEWAY SURELY LOOKS OUT FOR THEIR CUSTOMERS.
AND TWO-POINTS A POUND OF BUTTER!
WE'LL HAVE TO BRAG TO THE OTHER GIRLS HOW WE FIGURED IT ALL OUT. WITH THAT NICE MAN'S HELP, OF COURSE.

Safeway will help you to understand point rationing

If you're confused about any part of the Government's new ration plan, go to your Safeway. You'll find a clerk on duty, (he is wearing a badge that reads "Point Ration Information") who will answer your questions cheerfully and in detail.

Tax Plans in Payroll Terms

Two proposals for collecting income taxes from wage and salary earners by withholding 20 per cent of taxable income "at the source," have been outlined for House attention within the past two days.

Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas proposing to combine a modified Ruml plan of tax forgiveness with the 20 per cent withholding, recommended a collection scale which would result in taking the following amounts from wages and salaries on a weekly basis:

Weekly Salary	Single Person	Mar. Person No. Depend.	Mar. Person 2 Depend.
40	5.65	2.70	...
50	7.35	4.40	1.40
60	9.35	6.40	3.40
70	11.35	8.40	5.40
80	12.35	9.40	6.40
90	13.35	10.40	7.40
100	14.35	11.40	8.40

A similar withholding plan, tentatively approved by a House Ways and Means subcommittee but without any reference to tax forgiveness, would result in these weekly collections:

Weekly Salary	Single Person	Mar. Person No. Depend.	Mar. Person 2 Depend.
$ 30	$ 3.77	$ 1.22	$ .54
40	5.77	3.22	.84
50	7.77	5.22	2.50
60	9.77	7.22	4.50
70	11.77	9.22	6.50
80	13.77	11.22	8.50
90	15.77	13.22	10.50
100	17.77	15.22	12.50

Carlson Proposes Tax-Plan Merging

slightly different ways. Weekly amounts withheld under the Carlson plan would be a few cents less than the amounts withheld under the subcommittee plan for payers in the low brackets, a checkup showed.

Backers of the new Carlson bill indicated that if the Ways and Means Committee allowed another month to pass without reporting pay-as-you-earn tax legislation, a move would be started to bring the Carlson bill to the floor for a test, through a discharge petition.

While the search for a final pay-as-you-go formula continued at the Capitol, congressional tax leaders sought to speed up income collections through a national radio appeal for speedy payment in cooperation with the Treasury Department.

The appeal was made by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, ranking minority member of the Senate Finance Committee; Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John L. Sullivan.

All three emphasized that Congress would do nothing to put off the March 15 date that millions of citizens now have with the tax collector, or to lift the necessity for filing a return and paying at least a fourth of the year's income tax.

At the same time, the speakers made clear that all who make the required payments will be protected if the law is changed later.

LENNY'S LOONEY—IN AN ORIGINAL WAY. Lenny Kent, now raising the wind at Paul Young's, spends his spare time having brainstorms, then puts them into floor shows. His latest might be called a "smack on slacks" and is guaranteed to make all femme customers slack conscious (or self conscious when they wear slacks). Another dish of fresh satire is the Kent kidding of Pan-Am rhythm and such stars as Carmen Miranda. This last amounts to a Washington prevue of material that should soon panic New Yorkers—Lenny wrote it especially for his appearance at the Riobama, Manhattan's newest Latin spot.

Eunice Denison, elegant young person who formerly operated a number of smart Miami spots, is now in charge of the cocktail lounge, Lafayette Room and dining room of the Lafayette Hotel.

STAR VISITORS. Representative Clare Boothe Luce dinin in Burt's Trans-Lux, her hair bristling with little ribbon bows. (Note. Why doesn't some enterprising packer name one of his products "globaloney"?) . . . Cedric Guthrie, solicitor for the Radio Corporation of America, listening to Milton Davis' novachording in the Rainbow Room . . . Lovely Mary Howard in the Lounge Riviera, wearing a sirenish black gown with green sequin birds flying all over it . . . At Balalaika we saw David Adams, counsel for the FCC, and his attractive wife entertaining a party that included Dr. Elyah Adams of the Strong Memorial Hospital, Rochester, N. Y. . . . El Patio was an alphabet soup of parties the other eve. There were groups from OPA, WPB, ODT, WMC and OWI.

SEWING AND CROCHETING, as well as fine singing, are specialties of Carroll Paige with Frankie Masters' band at Del Rio. The chile carries her own sewing machine and a monster crocheting needle, is currently whipping up a purple fascinator with Kelly green and shocking pink spangles, also some stunning new gowns designed by her friend, Hazel, the Hollywood couturiere.

Joan Merrill, brilliant young star of radio, musical comedy and RKO pictures, will open at the Troika tomorrow night. Fond goodbyes will be said this evening to that redheaded hoyden, Cynda Glenn.

FABULOUS, IF TRUE. Escorcian, youthful looking trumpeter with Ovando's band at Treasure Island, keeps on telling us that he's 58 years old, backing it up with glamorous info about the symphonies he's played in, the number of times he's been married and the state of his teeth, but remaining evasive on the subject of face lifting. If he isn't fibbing, which we think he is, Escorcian is the male Fanny Ward.

A FEAST OF DANCE is the Lotus' new "Star Spangled Revue." Loretta and Navarre waltz with exquisite precision. Roguish Vivien Newell twists herself like a corkscrew in acrodancing. The little Dancettes do a Highland fling in gay kilties, parade in a "Rhapsody in Cellophane" and prance out as drummer lasses in red, white and blue get-ups.

We have heard of quaint beverages but when pianist Godfrey Straub of Dave Roberts' band in the Neptune Room, ordered bourbon and celery tonic—well, we began to understand the Straub "Down Beat on the Up Beat."

A LONG-DISTANCE MUSICAL CHAMPION is Matt Windsor of the Anchor Room. For almost five years Matt has been making harmony at Anchor without a letup except a couple of short vacations. He knows thousands of numbers, thousands of customers, has probably played a hundred thousand requests.

Knox Predicts Jap Fleet's Destruction

Probably Won't Be Allowed to Have Another, He Says

By the Associated Press

Before this war is over, Secretary Knox declared yesterday, "we'll utterly destroy the Japanese fleet."

"We'll probably impose upon her that she'll never have another fleet," the Navy chief added. "She has exhibited that she is not qualified to have one."

Knox gave these assurances to a Senate committee shortly after he told reporters the Atlantic situation "has been pretty stable lately." In response to questions, he said Allied bombings of the German submarine bases in northern France are effective but he questioned how much direct damage has been done to U-boats there.

"Some of the stalls are heavily protected," he informed a press conferences. The bombings "certainly are doing some damage—if nothing more than disrupting the life of the community," he said.

Knox expressed belief Germany has 300 to 400 submarines available, but explained they are not all at sea at once, since a submarine operates actively only a small fraction of the time.

One questioner wanted to know if German officers in the Italian fleet could make Italians fight. He referred to reports of German "contributions" to the Mussolini fleet.

The Italian is a good fighter where his patriotism is involved, Knox observed, but "he has no heart in this war. Even if he did have there would be some difficulty in having German officers operate on foreign ships."

Before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is considering extension of the Lease-Lend Act, Knox said the United States would have a big share in the job of policing the Pacific after the war's end. Consequently this country must have adequate bases there, he said. Such a system of bases already has been started, he indicated, with a large operating base established on a mandated island.

He added:

"We've expended our own money on these bases, and I can readily imagine that a group of Americans sitting at the peace table could make a very strong case for retaining those bases."

This observation came in response to an inquiry by Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan about steps to assure our retention of such bases after the war. Knox said he thought we have gone as far as possible now in that direction. Vandenberg expressed agreement with Knox' views on providing Pacific bases for after-the-war policing.

Groups Discuss Postwar Planning, Business Education

Business, education planning for the postwar period was the theme of discussion of the fifth annual business conference of business education teachers, divisions 10-13 of public schools, with members of the Negro business community last night at Cardozo High School.

Consumers' cooperatives, clerical employment, small business, real estate and insurance were the subjects of addresses by various conference leaders. Among the speakers were Charles Daughters, of the Senate Small Business Committee; E. B. Lancaster, special adviser on Negro affairs in the Department of Commerce, Charles H. Fearing and Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools.

George H. Murray presided.

Robbins Heads Treasury's New War Finance Body

W. M. Robbins of Greenwich, Conn., vice president of General Foods Corporation, was appointed yesterday to head a new war finance committee.

Robbins will direct the Victory Loan drive next month, and all other Government bond selling activities, Secretary Morgenthau said. Other committee members will be Harold N. Graves, in charge of the War Savings Staff, and George Buffington, in charge of the Victory Fund Committee.

The second Victory Fund drive will open April 12. The Treasury will seek a minimum of $13,000,000,000, shattering all previous Government financing records.

LET US HELP YOU WITH YOUR FIRST SHOPPING UNDER POINT RATIONING

A

Point ration shopping won't be easy the first time you try it. But your Safeway has done a lot of things to help you learn how it is done. Just slip on a coat

B

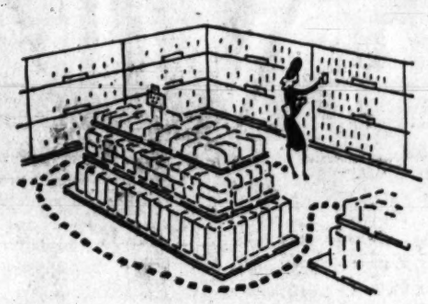
. . . take a stroll to your Safeway. Start early because point ration shopping will take more time . . . you have to figure point values as well as cash values.

C

You'll notice—Government signs showing point values for all ration items—how clearly we have identified the point value of rationed items . . . by red shelf markers and by marking the point value in red crayon on every rationed item. But best of all there's a clerk wearing a big badge . . . it reads "point ration information."

D

That's our "piece de resistance" . . . a clerk who's qualified to answer your questions. He knows the "whys and wherefores" of point rationing and will answer you cheerfully and in detail.

E


Next, browse around a bit and note the large variety of items stocked, the low ceiling prices, and how clearly we've marked the point value as well as the price value of all items rationed so it's easier for you to compare value.

F

Don't hesitate to go back to the point ration information clerk and ask any other questions which may occur to you. Be sure you know how to get the best value for your points.

G

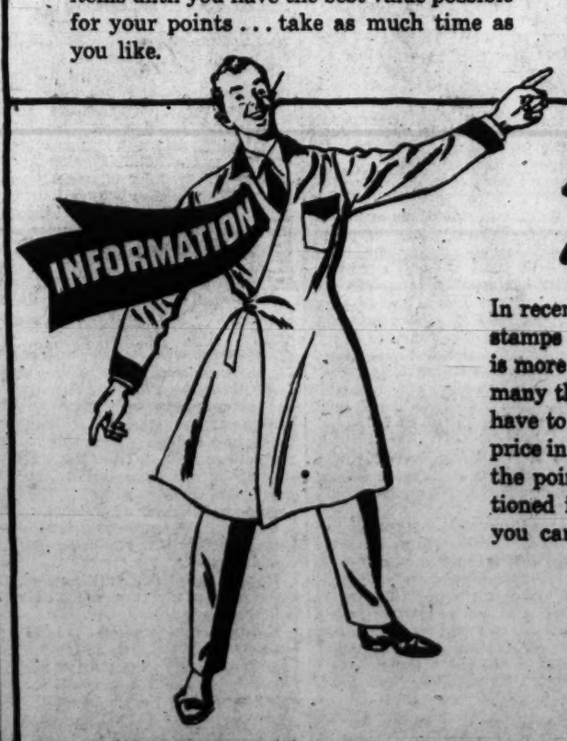
When you are ready to buy your groceries, make a mental note of the points required for each rationed item selected. If the point cost totals more than you plan . . . exchange items until you have the best value possible for your points . . . take as much time as you like.

H

When you arrive at the check-out counter . . . the clerk will call the point value of every rationed item and he will total the point values as well as cash values on the register. Thus, your sales slip becomes an accurate record of the point value and the cash value of your purchases.

I

On your way home . . . if you want to tell your neighbors that Safeway is doing everything possible to make "point ration" shopping easier for their customers . . . we won't object.



YOUR SAFEWAY CAN MAKE YOUR POINT RATION SHOPPING EASIER!

In recent months you've learned how to handle ration stamps for sugar and for coffee. Shopping with points is more complicated, but your Safeway Store has done many things to help you. Under point rationing you'll have to think about the price in points as well as the price in money. To make this easy Safeway has marked the point value on the shelf directly below each rationed item and also on the item itself. At Safeway you can make comparisons of values leisurely and select the items best suited to the amount of points and money you want to spend. But remember point ration shopping will take more time . . . it's doubly important to shop early in the day and early in the week. You'll get the "hang" of it quickly, but at the start you'll probably have some questions. So at Safeway you'll find a "point ration information" clerk—who is qualified to answer your questions—and will do it cheerfully and in full detail.

Lower Income Taxes

Quite a number of State governments already have reduced or are preparing to reduce taxes levied on incomes. New York—one of the four States that have instituted cuts—expects that her taxpayers will save more than 22 million dollars annually. Iowa has relinquished about five million dollars from income taxes. West Virginia has repealed its personal income tax law, and Mississippi has cut its income tax rate, although State revenues have risen due to income increases.

Judged solely as relief measures, cuts in State income taxes cannot be approved unreservedly. For under present conditions it is essential that taxes on income should rise, not fall, to combat inflationary pressure of rapidly expanding earnings. However, it is also highly desirable to reduce tax overlapping, insofar as possible. Opposition to increases in Federal income tax levies is stiffened when taxpayers have to make payments on the same income to two taxing bodies. By lightening the burden of State levies, therefore, the way is cleared for more vigorous taxation by the Federal Government.

Complete segregation of Federal and State sources of revenue—once the goal of tax reformers—is no longer practicable, in view of the greatly widened scale of public spending. But when opportunity is afforded to reduce overlapping in the field of income taxation, due to reduced demands upon State treasuries, it is all to the good. In some States, moreover, income tax receipts have risen spectacularly as a result of expanding incomes. In such cases, reductions in the tax schedules can be effected without correspondingly great reductions in revenue.

Tank Warfare

In our military history our ordnance has never reflected either the organization or the genius of our mechanical industry. In the last war, for instance, most of our A. E. F. had to be equipped by our Allies. That was one reason that nine months ago this newspaper devoted much attention to the problem of equipment, especially in tanks. Reports from Egypt showed that our M-3, or General Grant tank, was by no means equal to the task of desert warfare. At the time, the Army Chief of Ordnance, Maj. Gen. Levin H. Campbell, jr., while disputing some of our data, said that there would be no question about our equipment when our men came in contact with the Germans. This has now happened in Tunisia. How has our materiel performed under the test of actual combat? Fletcher Pratt, among other commentators, says that the initial "defeat in Tunisia shows up as not so much one of our troops as of the Army Ordnance Department, the same department that did so very badly in the last war." He says that we had no fighter planes equal to the German, that our antitank artillery only makes dents in the armor of the big German tanks, and that our mortars are far inferior to the enemy's. Senator Bankhead later took up the cry of inadequate and ineffective war equipment.

What is said about our fighter planes is, as we have said before, true enough. But the ordnance appearing on the Tunisian battlefield seems to have been in every way satisfactory. This is the testimony of every observer, British and American, who has returned. Take the tanks. To be sure, we have nothing as yet in action to compare with the giant new German Mark VI tank. This is a 56-tonner, with a 4-inch armor plate, 2 machine guns, and an 88-mm. gun. But, in the opinion of experts, our medium M-4, or the General Sherman, is unbeatable. What it lacks in bulk—it is a 32-tonner—it makes up in maneuverability. So the German monster can be outmaneuvered with ease. And, since the 4-inch armor plate covers only the front of the German tank, the advantage is thus with the General Sherman. Our tank, moreover, has better guns, two machine guns and a 90-mm. gun. These can do more than make a dent in Hitler's rolling fortresses. They can, and have, put them out of action. As for the mortars, the 105-mm. is likewise praised by returning observers, and there is no reason to doubt their assurance.

These assurances should be presented to the American people factually and intelligently. It is not enough to leave the matter, as Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell has done, with the statement that "we have the best equipment in the world." Too much misunderstanding arising in part from ordnance history and in part from our tardiness in this war has been created. General Somervell's assertion should be clarified. The American people, who are more mechanically minded than any other, can understand technical language. Some explanation, moreover, would help to beget confidence in a department of the Army which, in spite of its ability to draw upon the best mechanical genius in the world, requires rehabilitation. Ideally the Ordnance Department must be a channel between the using arm in the field and the factory front. Only in this war has it assumed that role. That knowledge will be a source of satisfaction to every family represented among our fighting men.

Proving Virtue

In time of war the courts must be scrupulous in defending the due processes of law even where known friends of our enemies are concerned. From this dictum there will be no dissent. But it would be sheer hypocrisy to disguise our regret that a technicality sufficed the Supreme Court to set aside the 2-to-6-year prison term imposed upon that notorious Nazi propagandist, George Sylvester Viereck. Viereck was the head and front of a propagandist machine financed with Hitler's money which sought to disguise from the American people the danger to our country of Hitler's bid for world power. This was done very skillfully. Viereck's method was to show that Britain was the enemy, not Germany. He identified himself with the isolationists, and won the cooperation of certain representatives of the American people in Congress to the extent of writing their speeches and distributing those speeches under congressional frank. Viereck, in short, helped to lull the people into a sense of false security and the country into lack of preparedness against the brooding menace of Hitlerism.

Under our law since 1938 such propagandists as Viereck must register their activities with our Government. Viereck did register as a foreign agent. He declared himself to be both the correspondent for a Munich newspaper and the agent and editorial writer of the German Library of Information, an agency of the German government. But he failed to give a "comprehensive statement of nature of business of registrant" beyond the description of himself as author and journalist. His defense was that such activity as writing congressional speeches was done on his own account, not Germany's. The trial justice, in his charge to the jury, bracketed all Viereck's activities as falling within the registration requirements of the Foreign Agents Act. And the jury convicted Viereck for willful failure to make a proper registration. However, the Supreme Court, by 5 to 2, has put aside the conviction on the grounds that Viereck was not required to explain activities other than his formal activities for his principals. The trial justice's procedure turns out to have been wrong. "The conviction," said the Court, "cannot stand if the charge was erroneous . . . however deserving of punishment his (Viereck's) conduct may seem." Thus the writing of congressional speeches was deemed, so to speak, extracurricular. In point of fact, they were of far more significance from the standpoint of the Foreign Agents Act than the editing of a German publication.

Plausibility is seemingly attached to the Court's reasoning by a subsequent amendment to the Foreign Agents Act explicitly authorizing the Government to ask questions about an agent's personal activities. But the plausibility is more apparent than real. The dissenting opinion of Justices Black and Douglas considers that the additional amendment was "purely declaratory." It considers the Court's view of the restrictions of the original statute "strained." "As a practical matter," says the opinion, written by Justice Black, "the very fact that in the instant case it is extremely difficult to determine with conviction which activities the petitioner carried on in his own behalf and which he carried on in behalf of Germany is reason enough for requiring him to report on both." Indeed, the Secretary of State in the general purposes of the act was authorized to prescribe the "rules, regulations and forms" necessary to carry out the act, an authority which, Justice Black contended, permitted the Secretary to ask the question Viereck failed to answer.

Plainly the whole intent of the law was to expose activities which the Court says Viereck could keep secret. How else could the Government keep track of persons whose job is to influence the political thought of this country on Germany's behalf? The House and Senate Committees reporting the bill declared it to be their purpose to turn "the spotlight of pitiless publicity" upon the propaganda activities of the agents of foreign principals. Such men as Viereck are like icebergs, leaving only part, and the most formal part, of their activities revealed. However, if the Court insists upon being hypersensitive on the subject of civil rights in wartime, these enemies in our midst are likely to escape detection. It is a pity that the Court does not seem to realize that propaganda is the weapon which Hitler himself has declared is the favored instrument against "soft and degenerate Yankeedom." In its overanxiety to be scrupulous the Court even went to the extent of gratuitously scolding the prosecutor, William Power Maloney. Without doubt Mr. Maloney is a vigorous prosecutor. But his vigor was exercised only in behalf of the public safety. In this cause an excess of zeal is excusable if the facts are not misstated. And this was not at issue in the Court's reproof. Moreover, as was said by the dissenting justices, to shear the prosecutor of all oratorical emphasis, while leaving wide latitude to the defense, is to load the scales of justice. It would thus seem that the Court bent over backward in seeking to prove this country's legal virtue against the lawlessness of the Hitler regime.

Hawaii's Rights

It is heartening to learn that within a few days Hawaii will recover vital civil rights of which it has been deprived under martial law since December 7, 1941. For 15 months Hawaii's 425,000 inhabitants have endured uncomplainingly the severest martial law ever imposed under the American flag. Equally without a murmur the community has put up with extraordinary inconveniences. Blackouts for 450 consecutive nights have been total; the curfew has been enforced strictly, keeping pedestrians and vehicles off the streets after dark unless on defense duty; rationing of foodstuffs and small luxuries has been at a minimum which the mainland may never experience. Withal the community has cooperated to the full with the military. Civilians in Hawaii have done their share of defense work in the reconstruction of Pearl Harbor, in the hospitals, in emergency blood donations, in the precautionary measures against another Japanese attack. Clerks in shops and banks, workers on sugar and pineapple plantations, women and even children have contributed their help whenever needed. "The civilian population of Hawaii," said Secretary Ickes in approving the curtailment of martial law, "has distinguished itself for its courage and resolution in the face of danger, for its discipline in the face of severe restraints and for its willingness to make every sacrifice to aid the war." The Secretary's tribute is well deserved.

Now the people will have returned to them some of the rights which this country is fighting to sustain in the civilized world. Eighteen functions of government on March 10 will pass from military to civil control. These functions, which range from judicial procedure, censorship of civilian mail, public health and education to such minor details as the collection and disposal of garbage, include all Hawaii's peacetime rights except those deemed essential for defense. Hawaiians will rejoice, and the rest of the American people will rejoice with them. Millions of Americans hitherto have appreciated the islands as one of America's unique subtropical beauty spots. It is still that, despite the Japanese. What Americans will now appreciate is that the Japanese bombs failed likewise to destroy the spirit of the Hawaiian people. Indeed, they hardened it.

Ribbentrop In Rome

The visit made to Rome last weekend by Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's foreign minister, is the latest move of many which the Nazis have feverishly been making recently to mobilize the manpower and resources of conquered Europe behind Germany's war effort. They are supposed to be Hitler's answer to Casablanca.

Since Mussolini's monumental miscalculation of June, 1940, when, believing that France was finished and Britain would not long continue the struggle, he plunged his nation into war, Italy has suffered one disaster after another. Its African empire has been torn to shreds and tatters. More and more the principal Italian cities are being bombed into rubble by the Allied air forces. And now the Italians have before them the most unpleasant prospect of ending the war on the losing side. All these circumstances have contributed to making the Italian people deathly sick of the war and eager to get out of it. But as an occupied country Italy has not much choice in the matter and will have no choice until Allied troops have been landed on the peninsula.

However, discontent in Italy is undoubtedly rising, and the possibility of an internal collapse is one which the Nazis must reckon with. It is hardly surprising, then, that Hitler and his henchmen find it necessary to take steps to bolster up their wobbling ally. But that is only the negative side of the picture. On the positive side is the fact that Italy, for all its military weakness, is still an important reservoir of manpower which Hitler hopes to draw on to make good his own mounting shortages. So one consequence of the Ribbentrop-Mussolini conversations may very well be an increased flow of laborers from Italy to the Reich. In fact, Berne reports state that Mussolini has promised at least 500,000 workers to Hitler plus 15 additional divisions to be sent to the Eastern Front. But the execution of any such agreements will not prove easy. Despite Axis claims to that effect, the Rome parley was anything but an effective answer to the Casablanca conference.

RED FOX IN THE SNOW

Into the white temple fled the fox,
A streak of flame across the unpatterned snow,
Leaping the fallen tree, skirting the rocks,
Electric tail full-furred and twice the size
Of head and body. How well the sharp cat-eyes
Must know this sanctuary.
Where circling spruce trees link their boughs
In one unbroken and tenacious chain,
Where safe within all hunted things have lain.
Will the fox remember in this ice-walled room
The summer haven and the needle bed,
The mating and the litter bred?
Or will she in this blind
And stricken flight forget all
Save the bared teeth and the cunning mind?

Size Of The Army

By Mark Sullivan

A Fixed Factor

IN ALL the boiling discussion about manpower—the bills pending and proposed, the differences of policy between heads of Administration agencies—one point is concrete. The one point is actually two: First, what should be the size of the Army? Second, who should decide the size of the Army? With this military decision settled, the tangle of controversies about civilian manpower, while still difficult, will at least be simpler to understand.

The Army heads say the size of the Army should be 7,500,000. They say it firmly and unanimously. President Roosevelt as Commander in Chief backs them up more than firmly, almost impatiently. The real question is whether someone else, specifically Congress by legislative action, should make a different decision, and impose that different decision on the Army.

(Seven and a half million for the Army, added to officers, with the Navy and other armed services, would make a total of nearly 11 million.)

THE CONTROVERSY began last December. A Senate Subcommittee on Military Affairs heard testimony from M. Cot, who had been French Minister of Aviation before the war. M. Cot told the committee that, as summarized by a newspaper account at the time, "France, before the war, made the mistake of draining her factories of men in order to build up a large army.' 'We had an army of men rather than an army of machines.'"

From that statement some Senators drew an inference about our American situation, saying that we were sending too many into the Army, not leaving enough for industry. This led President Roosevelt to comment at a press conference. He said the position taken by the Senators was "amazing." The word was justified, for there was no analogy between the failure of France to put emphasis on airplane building during the years preceding the war and the problem we had after we had been in the war a year, after we had started an adequate airplane program and had only to determine how large our Army should be.

The present stage of the controversy arose recently. After we had begun to feel the squeeze of civilian manpower on farms and elsewhere, it was proposed in Congress that the Army be kept smaller than the figure fixed by the Army heads. Again President Roosevelt took notice, saying that the size of the Army had been fixed last August, and would have to stand.

This is really the answer for everybody. All must assume that plans for the conduct of the war have been made months ago, that probably commitments have been made to our Allies, and that these plans and commitments assume armed forces of some 11 million. That the size of the Army should now be reduced by Congress would be disturbing. It would be a sign to our Allies, and our enemies, that a military decision made by the Commander in Chief of the American forces is subject to change by Congress. It would be especially disquieting to Russia, already disturbed by what it regards as delay in fulfillment of plans and commitments made more than a year ago for a second front in Europe. The world would learn that the division of powers in the American form of government, which makes for awkwardness in agreeing upon international arrangements for peace, makes also for uncertainty even in the conduct of war in cooperation with Allies. Enough men in Congress realize this to give assurance that Congress will not change the size of the Army as fixed by our military leaders. What is a desirable size of the Army may still be a subject of academic discussion, but hardly of military decision.

TRUE, fixing the size of the Army involves some difficult factors—the necessity of building and manning enough ships to keep our forces abroad supplied, in the face of submarine menace; the desirability of keeping enough manpower in our factories to equip not only our own Army but as much as we can of the armies of Russia and China; the necessity of raising enough food to supply our civilian population, our armed forces, and to as large an extent as possible the armed forces and civilian population of our Allies. But our military heads have convinced leaders of Congress that they have taken all these factors into account, and know what they are doing. No one else can know as well.

Accepting the size of the Army as fixed, there remains open a large area of controversy about which several bills are pending, and some will pass. The broad question is, how to get the maximum use and best disposition of our civilian man and woman power, to the end that we bring about, as Manpower Administrator McNutt has put it, "the right person in the right place at the right time."

Airplanes For China

By Paul Schubert

Problems Of The Far East

THE QUESTION of airplanes for China has come back into the news, this time in the form of positive statements that the sending of 500 planes to China will (1) enable that country to survive, and (2) convert it from its present defensive status into a power capable of inflicting serious damage upon Japan.

What kind of airplanes?

Are they to be bombers? Fighters? A mixture of types?

What are they going to use for fuel?

How about spare parts? Spare engines? Mechanics, ground crews . . . airdromes . . . ? Who's going to fly the planes, and where are the pilots, gunners, bombardiers and aircraftsmen to be trained?

HOW ARE they going to be protected from enemy air power? Is there an aircraft warning service and radio network? Are there antiaircraft batteries, and defenses against "vertical invasion" by parachutists?

Talk about "sending 500 planes" is a dangerous generalization, typical of the worst type of argument used by the proponents and enthusiasts of "air power" because it is plausible. It appears to offer so much for so little.

What, after all, are "500 airplanes" to a country producing something like 60,000 airplanes a year! We're pikers if we don't send them . . . it won't cost us much, and look what they'll do!

What will they do?

Five hundred airplanes, taken by themselves, won't do a thing. Airplanes are not air power—as they are only one ingredient of air power, no more and no less essential than any other ingredient.

Gasoline is air power, too—special high-octane aviation gas.

Bombs are air power. What good are all the bombers in the world unless they have a generous and constant supply of all the expensive instruments of aerial destruction—the "block busters," the "little 500-pounders," the incendiaries, the special bombs for use against ships? You don't get bombs out of a hat.

Even machine-gun ammunition . . . wartime aviation uses up that stuff by the ton. Bombers use it to protect themselves. As of fighters, it's the tool with which they do business—no machine-gun ammunition (including tracers) and you might as well have no fighters.

And, of course, the ground organization is something air power simply can't do without—the wizards who are able to patch up a mangled plane, stick on a wing salvaged from another mangled plane, mount a new motor, tune the ship so that a piece of junk becomes an aerodynamic miracle able to fly once more.

Even a little matter of runways can make all the difference between your ability to use bombers as well as fighters from a particular airdrome.

"Sending 500 airplanes to China" is a dangerous generalization.

Admittedly we should send air power to China. Nowhere in this world will it pay bigger dividends.

But why kid people into the idea that sending 500 airplanes means sending air power?

To do that is to guarantee disappointing them.

Is the idea simply to hand 500 planes to China, and leave China to worry about the rest—the pilots, the fuel, the bombs, the ammunition, the crews? Is it to be a "one-shot" gift that China expends, using the 500 planes for what damage they will do until they are gone, and then being back where she started?

Is that air power? Does that add up to an intelligent way to fight wars against big-time opponents like Japan?

Or is the idea that we should maintain an air force of 500-plane strength (whatever that means) in China?

To do that would cost us far more than 500 airplanes.

TO DO THAT we'd be making good losses, combat losses, crackups, losses due to wear and tear. To keep 500 planes going would cost us several times 500 planes a year, and would also involve us in a considerable transport setup . . . at present writing an air-transport setup over one of the world's most difficult routes.

Perhaps that's what we ought to be doing. "We" in the plural sense. For this question is bigger than the United States. This is a question of spending a part of the United Nations war-making strength—a percentage of our power.

If it can be well spent in China, and should be spent there, and is to be spent there—those are decisions that can be made only by the interallied United Nations high command, not by the American public. And if the answer is Yes, then the question of which of us contributes the air power is immaterial—British, Russia, China, America.

For this is all one war, and the only possible winning strategy is world strategy.

Fourth Term

There has appeared for some months among whispering groups in magazines and in newspapers rumors about a fourth term.

These rumblings at such a serious time excite uneasy forebodings as to the quality of our reputed independence of thought and action: it jars our claims to self reliance and ability of self government; it implies a dearth of leadership and of statesmen and suggests a subtle increasing unstable condition so characteristic of weak vacilliating nations.

The situation reminds one of an era passed through by our sister republic, Mexico, nearly 50 years ago. Porfirio Diaz was its President for 30 years, 26 of which were continuous. To give the continuity of his presidency legal sanction the constitution was changed, granting him permission to serve as long as the people wanted him! He was forced to leave Mexico in 1915 and lived in exile. And do we recall the fine disdain heaped upon the Mexican electorate, and do we remember how we patted ourselves and gave thanks for our Anglo-Saxon heritage?

Our country is waging a cataclysmic war to the death and bitter end. Our boys on the battlefields and the workers at home are cheerfully making utmost sacrifices. Unity of purpose must prevail lest we perish. The incident of the third term disturbed the faith of many in the capacity of our electorate to sense disintegrating factors in the Government. Should so-called friends and bureaucrats of the present Administration undertake by any form of subterfuge to saddle the Nation with a fourth presidential term, disunity would grow out of bounds and our war effort would be immensely reduced as a consequence.

Teen Age Production

Food and the other necessities of life will help win this war as much as anything else now. On the other hand, the lack of these things in Europe and elsewhere will aid the Allies in winning the war. So why not let the teen-age boys stay home and help produce? They should be allowed to remain at home until 21 years of age, at the earliest, before being inducted into combat forces.

Bringing soldiers from the camps and elsewhere will cause much confusion and additional costs.

Guaranteeing teen-age producers would involve changing the law as to the Selective Service and the teen-age law. But how could the changes possibly aid the enemy?

Kilday Bill

Congressman Kilday has introduced a bill in Congress which, if it passes, would exempt from military service every married man with one child or more. His bill says take every single able-bodied man between the ages of 18 and 38 in the country first! Think of it! I, alone, know 12 married men, with children, whose wives are working and their combined incomes are well over $6000 a year. Are they a special class apart; not able to help us win the war?

Do mothers of single men realize that there is a tremendous pressure being brought on the Congressmen and Senators by prominent married men with children to pass this Kilday bill? And do they realize that a majority of the present Congress may not be strong enough in principle to resist that pressure.

The President of the United States, the heads of the Navy, Army and War Manpower Commission have stated publicly that all able-bodied men of draft age must help end this war regardless of whether they are single men or fathers.

Let all able men of draft age be drafted and then, according to their particular aptitudes, put them into jobs that are vital to the war effort, whether that be on farms, in war plants or war industries, but let them all get into this fight, and let's get it over quickly so that all may enjoy together and without bitterness, the benefits of peace.

Hoarding Pays Dividends

Those of us who have been careful never to have on our shelves one can of fruits or vegetables unnecessary to our immediate needs were astounded to find that those chiselers who bought up as large a supply of processed foods as cupboard, pantry, and cellar could hold were to have but one 8-point coupon extracted from their No. 2 books for each of those cans, regardless of size or content; that not all the coupons could legally be removed from any hoarder's book lest he be forced to live on an "unbalanced diet." We poor, honest fools find that not one rationed food in a popular sized can appears on the ration list for a point value as low as eight points. Such inequality is bound to react unfavorably on our all-out cooperation in winning the war; we begin to wonder if the hoarder isn't just a little smarter than the rest of us. We feel that our Government to all intents and purposes has patted the hoarder on the back for his selfish foresight.

The Once Over

Restaurant Scene

("Restaurant food quotas will be cut 50 per cent in the new rationing regulations."—News item.)

Customer—What's good today?

Waiter—Do you mean things we've got or haven't got?

Customer—Have you any cold cuts?

Waiter—Everything we've got is cut, hot or cold.

Customer—Is there a specialty of the house tonight?

Waiter—Yes, sir. It's our All Out Blueplate?

Customer—Just what is an All Out Blueplate?

Waiter—We're all out of most everything on it.

Customer—Suppose you come back in a few minutes. I'd like to go over the menu carefully.

Waiter—What's the use?

Customer—There's quite a long list of things here.

Waiter—Yes, but we don't serve them.

Customer—What's the idea of putting them on the menu?

Waiter—Morale, I suppose.

Customer—Some of these things are marked with stars. What does one star beside a dish mean?

Waiter—It means we ran out of that yesterday.

Customer—What does two stars mean?

Waiter—Two stars mean that the OPA banned that dish this noon.

Customer—What's the chances of getting these things with no stars beside 'em?

Waiter—Fifty-fifty.

Customer—I see you have a choice of soups.

Waiter—No choice; just a risk. We may have it and we may not.

Customer—Is the tomato soup canned?

Waiter (amazed)—I should say not. If you want canned soup, it's 15 cents extra.

Customer—How's the fish today?

Waiter—Fish is the only product we see enough of to know much about. It looks good.

Customer—I think I'll take some sardines.

Waiter—Don't be silly. Where do you think you are, at the Ritz!

Customer—Maybe I'll just have some vegetables.

Waiter—Maybe. The vegetable situation changes from minute to minute.

Customer—Is your spinach canned?

Waiter—Oh, no. We can't afford canned vegetables. I'm afraid you'll have to be satisfied with fresh ones!

Customer—Oh well, I'll leave it all to you. Bring whatever you can spare.

Waiter—Now you're talking sense.

Customer—And will you bring some catsup or chile sauce?

Waiter—OH, YOU MEAN YOU WANT THE $3 DINNER!

A new malady is about to sweep the American home. It will be known as Point Battiness. We heard of a woman who became so dizzy trying to understand the point system that when one of her hens layed an egg yesterday she went out and put two coupons in its nest.

Then there is the case of the wife who, studying the ration values, said to her husband, "I'll just have to have a bigger allowance, Herbert." And got the reply, "Do you think I'm made of points?"

"Dry Beans Rationed"—Headline. A dry bean, we understand, is the kind almost everybody is suffering from today except old John Kieran.

Wages And Inflation

I worked for American Car & Foundry into 1918 before signing up to lick the Kaiser, which I did single handed except for the help of two million other guys. My pals of that day thought themselves well paid. Anyhow, I was able to tuck away $2000 in liberty bonds for 14 months work.

Now 52 years old, lively, I work in a Baltimore war plant, doing about the same work as last time. Had to join another union, which is, I suppose, fighting for my rights. I get 95 per cent more than in 1918. I save two-thirds of it, and if the cost of living goes up 7 per cent annually, I ought to be able to take it without a squawk to high heaven. Certainly the Government is paying plenty, all it ought to, for what we turn out. You see, I'm being honest, minus any bull.

Now and then the boys of my union meet. There's speech-making and grievances as long as Hitler's crime list. The stuff about awful living costs is dragged out and dusted off. Now, honestly, what can you spend the stuff on—unless you patronize the black markets?

Today I notice the United Electric Radio and Machine Workers are getting on the wagon, with a string of gripes that sound like the prelude for a polite wage boost. They yap about inflation, bureaucratic mismanagement—then spring a proposition of their own for retroactive pay, a practice which should be thrown permanently into discard!

They've discovered the New Deal muddle is being applied to the whole war. They blame some parties and absolve others, though they're all in it together. Boys, it's you and not the farmers you group yourselves with that's to blame. The farmers, like us real Democrats, didn't vote for a third New Deal. You did. How will higher wages cure the inflation you complain about. You're going at it rear end to, New Deal fashion.

Roosevelt's 10 Years

By Ernest Lindley

Confidence And The Will To Act

MARCH 4, 1933, is getting to seem a long time back. But many of the sentences in Franklin D. Roosevelt's first inaugural address have not lost their strength. For example: "This great Nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and will prosper. So, first of all, let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself —nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance. In every dark hour of our national life a leadership of frankness and vigor has met with that understanding and support of the people themselves which is essential to victory."

LINDLEY

These sentences come close to being the textual heart of the Roosevelt regime. He brought into the Presidency supreme confidence in the strength of the United States and its institutions and ideals. He also brought the will to act.

It is not easy to recapture the sense of dismay and frustration which gripped the country during the year or so preceding Roosevelt's first inauguration, or the fatalism which bound many in high places in government, industry and finance. This fatalism was tied up with devotion to certain pseudo-economic precepts. The economic world was supposed to be self-operating, if you gave it enough time to work its mysterious ways. This faith was especially favored among men who looked upon themselves, with some reason, as enterprising. But it was, in fact, a quasi-Oriental form of mysticism which denied the ability of men to improve their lot by their own efforts. Roosevelt revived the Western urge to surmount difficulties by action. We got plenty of action—some excellently directed, some confused, and some misplaced. But the spell cast by the depression and by the psuedo-economics popularized in preceding years was broken.

MOREOVER, this action was obtained through the channels of American constitutional government. Of course, some of the specific laws and acts of the period were held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court which passed on them. But this was due chiefly to an exceptionally rigid interpretation of the Constitution which, fortunately, has been buried and probably never can be revived.

The problems with which the Nation has had to deal during the last decade may be grouped under three headings. First came the problems of economic recovery, after a decline more severe than any industrial Nation had ever suffered without revolution. Second came what were often called reforms, although the word is perhaps not broad enough. They ranged from soil conservation, through elimination of various abuses in private finance, to social insurance. There were a great number of these, largely because they had been accumulating over many years. To absorb them in a bunch was not easy: this was the penalty for the failure to act earlier as the needs became apparent. The release of the pent-up demand for various reforms undoubtedly conflicted at some points with economic recovery. At other points, the reforms were essential to recovery.

THE THIRD GROUP of problems with which Roosevelt had to deal were international. He dedicated the Nation "to the policy of the good neighbor" in his first inaugural. And, it is significant to recall, he saw from the beginning the potential meaning of the Hitler regime in Germany. (Hitler's power was confirmed by the last "free" election in Germany on March 5, 1933, the day after Roosevelt entered the White House.) He also saw trouble ahead in the Pacific, and used some of the first emergency public works funds to start the rebuilding of the Navy. In his appeal to the heads of all nations to join in disarmament, on May 16, 1933, Roosevelt made a statement with which many military men in the democracies disagreed until they saw the German army in action in 1939 and 1940. He said: "Modern weapons of offense are vastly stronger than modern weapons of defense." Beginning with his annual message to Congress in January, 1934, Roosevelt issued regular warnings that the international sky was darkening.

Hundreds of millions of words have been written in criticism of various Roosevelt policies, and more millions will be. I venture to predict that most of those written in the future will be more discriminating than many of those written in the past. Likewise, some of the language used by spokesmen for the Administration was extreme. The darker prophecies of a few years ago as to the future of our institutions now seem thoroughly ridiculous.

Roosevelt has met the big crises better than he has met many of the smaller ones. His grasp of the big problems has been better than his grasp of many of the smaller ones. With the passage of time, the big accomplishments stand out more and the smaller mistakes recede into the background.

Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 2 (AP).—Secretary Morgenthau and Congress will be interested in the strong trend of public opinion in favor of pay-as-you-go taxation and its usual complement, the withholding of taxes at source.

Most proposals for instituting the pay-as-you-go system call for deducting the tax from wages and salaries on payday. The House Ways and Means Committee recently went on record as favoring tax collection by that method.

Half of the Nation's taxpayers and a clear majority of those with opinions on the subject came to that conclusion fully eight months ago, and today the number has grown to the overwhelming proportion of 4 to 1.

This means that although John Doe, one of the 30 million or more income-tax payers, already has several other items deducted from his pay check, he is willing to accept another deduction in order to keep even with the tax collector. Most taxpayers say they welcome the idea because it would be the most convenient way to pay what is owed.

The opinions of taxpayers on the pay-deduction plan were gathered by 213 field reporters in personal conversations with employed persons who will have to pay an income tax on March 15. They were asked:

"Would you like to pay your Federal income tax by having your employer deduct a regular amount from your wage or salary each time you are paid?"

The issue has been covered in similar surveys twice in the past, and the trend of sentiment is shown below:

	Yes.	No.	Undec.
February, 1942	45%	45%	10%
June, 1942	50	43	7
Today	76	19	5

To put the country on a pay-as-you-go basis, the Ruml plan, advanced by Beardsley Ruml of New York, proposes that the "tax clock be set ahead one year" so that payments in 1943 will apply to 1943 income instead of to the previous year's earnings.

The Ruml plan has caught the public's imagination in dramatic fashion. Whereas last November only 22 per cent of taxpayers questioned in an Institute survey had heard about the Ruml plan, by December the number had risen to 44 per cent, and by January, 81 per cent had heard of it and 9 out of every 10 with opinions favored it.

The trend of public support for the Ruml plan is shown in the following survey results:

	Attitude of Taxpayers With Opinions on the Ruml Plan.
Favor Ruml plan	76%	90%
Opposed	24	10

Last week this tide of public sentiment was reflected in Congress when, with the backing of a substantial number of members, steps were taken to force early consideration of the measure in the House of Representatives.

Farm Labor Shortage

Wickard Explains His Program

Your "Letters to the Editor" department recently carried a statement from Mr. Louis Bromfield concerning the Government's management of wartime food production.

Mr. Bromfield's letter is intemperate and inaccurate. For example, he ridicules a "dream army of three million unskilled workers." I take it Mr. Bromfield refers to our plans to mobilize seasonal workers, emergency harvest workers and year-round workers for agricultural production. We hope we can enlist more than three million men, women and children for farm work in 1943 and that they will to a large extent replace the loss of skilled regular workers. I realize the new workers will not be as effective as the workers that already have been taken from the farm. I wonder what Mr. Bromfield would prefer me to do, nothing? He apparently fails to realize that we, as every other nation in war, find ourselves short of manpower and therefore have to use all available sources if we are to compete with other nations which are doing so.

Alleviating Steps

I think the record will show that most of the steps taken to alleviate the farm labor situation have been taken at the instance of the Department of Agriculture. In July, 1942, I helped to negotiate with the Mexican government an agreement which permitted the entry of Mexican workers to help out our hard pressed farmers. This was one of the first steps taken to meet the shortages of farm workers and the program developed as a result of it included the movement by the Department of Agriculture of domestic workers from one part of the country to another.

I think Senator Tydings of Maryland is to be congratulated on the legislation which provides for the deferment from military service of essential workers in agriculture. However, I feel the Senator would agree that his proposal was antedated by a similar, although less inclusive, plan worked out by the Department of Agriculture with Selective Service officials.

Mr. Bromfield says, "No farmer wants any part of Mr. Wickard's 100-million-dollar subsidy."

I suppose Mr. Bromfield is referring to a program which recently went to Congress providing for incentive payments for increased production of peanuts, soybeans, flaxseed and other war crops.

I think Mr. Bromfield will agree with me that production costs for farmers are increasing. Either we attempt to offset these higher costs and get vital production by raising farm prices, or we must offset them by some such method as incentive payments. If we increase farm prices, this means an increase in the price ceilings on feed and food prices and this is against the policy established by the Congress. I would be derelict in my duty if I did not attempt, through payments, to get the farmers the increased returns they need in order to produce more.

Mr. Bromfield says, "On the food production front we lost the year 1942, and now we have lost the year 1943."

So far as 1943 is concerned, we must wait and see, but Mr. Bromfield's statement that "we lost the year 1942" is absurd. In 1942, for the third successive year, the farmers of the United States broke all high records for production. Food production last year exceeded the average for the 1935-39 period by 27 per cent.

It is true that the weather favored us in 1942, but planning and foresight must be credited with the tremendous increases in the production of hogs, about 25 per cent over 1941, sizeable increases in poultry and egg production, 10,762,000 acres of soybeans in 1942 by comparison with 5,881,000 in 1941; 3,690,000 acres of peanuts in 1942 by comparison with 1,914,000 acres in 1941; 4,402,000 acres of flaxseed in 1942 by comparison with 3,275,000 acres in 1941, and so on through a long list.

Mr. Bromfield says: "No figures are given out concerning the hundreds of thousands of acres of potatoes, corn and soybeans that are still unharvested in the field. Nor are any figures given concerning the soybeans that cannot be marketed because . . . the Secretary of Agriculture . . . overlooked the fact that there is a limit to the capacity of soybean processing plants."

Some food goes to waste every year because of this situation, and there is no doubt that lack of labor in some areas last year caused more waste than usual. I have publicly referred to this situation, and the figures will be published when they are available.

Farmers Will Respond

As to the marketing of soybeans, at the time the program for increased production of soybeans was drawn, plans were made to ship soybeans to the South and to other areas where there might be excess processing capacity. Thus far, contracts have been signed to crush more than 12 million bushels of soybeans in plants that ordinarily crush cottonseed or peanuts and additional quantities will be crushed out of the soybean area as the beans are harvested. At this date there is no shortage of capacity for crushing soybeans.

Mr. Bromfield says that he has heard "good, honest, patriotic farmers" say that they were all right and they would eat, and that when the city people did not have enough to eat, "maybe Washington will do something about the situation."

I do not believe this represents the sentiment of the majority of farmers and the majority are good, honest and patriotic farmers. The farmers of this country will not be satisfied with producing enough for themselves and their families. I know that farmers will respond to their Nation's call to produce all they can. I am hopeful, now that Mr. Bromfield has got his spleen out of his system, that he, too, will do all he can to overcome the obstacles to production on his farm.

Absenteeism Gets Action

Crackdown Started

The War Manpower Commission and the War Production Board announced yesterday that they would move jointly from now on in a direct and sweeping attack on absenteeism in war industries.

As the first move, it was announced that a comprehensive plan would be offered within the next week or so under which labor, management, communities and Governmental agencies would be asked to cooperate in the program.

WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt and WPB Chairman Donald Nelson, it was revealed, have exchanged letters agreeing in principle on steps taken and contemplated. Both letters emphasized, it was said, the broad responsibility for job absences and the necessity for local cooperation to reduce them.

It was agreed that the rate of job absences in many war industry areas was assuming proportions to warrant organized and systematic attention. Although adequate statistics were not available as yet, McNutt and Nelson agreed that a remedial program should be aimed at sources, establishing responsibility for time lost from work, and acting through a remedial program of correction of causes and full public information.

In a report on absenteeism released February 14, OWI stated that there was a job absence of about 3 per cent in industry before the war industries got under way. Job absence now, on a monthly basis, was estimated to be twice as much, and in some cases higher.

In the forthcoming setup, McNutt suggested to Nelson that the WPB's Labor Production Division be designated to work with the War Manpower's national, regional, and local staff and the corresponding War Manpower Labor-Management Committees in coordinating the program.

The plan views, it was said, a key role for labor-management committees.

No Allred 'Reward'

Hearing By Senate Group

Charles I. Francis, Houston attorney, last night announced that he was prepared to "prove" to a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee today that James V. Allred, former Texas Governor, stood for election against Senator W. Lee O'Daniel without the Administration agreeing that, if defeated, he would be rewarded with a Federal judgeship.

"There was no encouragement from the Administration before Governor Allred decided to be a candidate, and there was no help from the Administration after the campaign began," said Francis, who handled the "defense" of Allred before the subcommittee.

Allred, former Federal district judge as well as ex-Governor, recently was nominated by President Roosevelt to a seat on the bench of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. Confirmation of his appointment is opposed by a bloc of Southern Democrats headed by Senators Overton and Ellender of Louisiana.

Assailed by O'Daniel

At subcommittee hearings on the contested nomination, O'Daniel yesterday assailed the appointment in bitterest terms as subversion of the "sacred judiciary" to reward a New Deal "yes man" opponent.

"Before us for Senate confirmation or rejection is the nomination of a person who discarded the royal robes of the sacred judiciary and donned the dirty duds of politics to throw political mudballs and stinkbombs all over the great State of Texas," O'Daniel declared.

"For this apparent disrespect for our judiciary system he was rewarded with defeat by the good people of Texas, and much more generously rewarded by our ex-executive government with another appointment to the Federal bench, a lifetime judgeship, at a greatly increased salary."

O'Daniel cleared up one point in his opposition to Allred in a new Senate confirmation battle distinguised by total absence of serious attacks on the nominee's fitness. He announced that he would not make use of the senatorial prerogative to block the nomination on "personal grounds."

The Senator declared that Allred "crawled down off" his seat as Federal district judge in Texas to become his "yes-man opponent" when it appeared that O'Daniel's Senate service was unsatisfactory to "some of the political mugwumps and patronage dispensers who hang around the throne in Washington."

"Agreement" Cited

The charge was made "all over Texas"—but not by him—that "there was a gentleman's agreement" that Allred would be given another judgeship if defeated, O'Daniel stated.

The Senator's version of who initiated the charge varied from that of William M. Ryan, who asserted that O'Daniel hinted at a "deal" by challenging his campaign opponent to prove that he had President Roosevelt's indorsement. Ryan was one of several leading Texas lawyers brought before the committee by Francis to attent to the high caliber of Alfred's performance as district judge.

Senator Overton, appearing in opposition to confirmation, pointed out that Louisiana, with a civil code different from that of other States, was without representation on the Fifth Circuit bench, whereas Texas, if Allred is confirmed, will have two circuit judges.

He attacked the nomination as a "political on again, off again, on again trifling with the judiciary."

Fake Ration Rumors Believed Inspired by Axis Agents

Ration jitters among civilians is giving WPB planners more trouble these days than would come from a barrel of Hitlers with delirium tremens.

It's so bad, in fact, that officials are wondering whether it's something more than recurrent mental lapses on the part of unthinking citizens. At the same time, the Government is almost powerless to do anything about it except to reiterate again and again that, for instance, clothes will not be rationed unless panicky hoarders just make it impossible for sincere patriots.

As to origin of ration rumors about clothes, liquor and what-have-you, only guesses could be offered—guesses which went so far as to include pro-Axis agents.

The Axis agents hunch was based on an incident several weeks ago when the same ration rumor was repeated almost simultaneously in San Francisco, Dallas, Detroit, Cleveland and Washington.

A woman, so ran the tale, asked the OPA here to replace a lost ration book. She received, instead, a ration book allegedly tailored for clothes rationing with instructions that she would be limited to $80 worth of clothes a year. A hasty letter, it seems, came almost in the next mail asking her to return the book and forget all about the incident—it had been a mistake.

Glaring fallacy in the yarn, enough to dismiss it, is that the OPA here has nothing to do with lost ration books. The local community ration board handles this. But the incident was impressive enough to lead OPA officials to ask FBI to check.

President Urged To Aid Axis Jews

"To secure the exit of the persecuted Jews from Axis Europe and the creation of a haven for them in Allied or neutral countries or in Palestine," the Washington branch of the American Jewish Congress sent a telegram to President Roosevelt, Rabbi Harry Silverstone, president, announced yesterday.

In the telegram, Rabbi Silverstone said, his organization allied itself with the purposes of a mass meeting held at Madison Square Garden, New York, Monday night, under the auspices of the American Jewish Congress, American Federation of Labor, Congress of Industrial Organization, Church Peace Union, Free World Association and other organizations.

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX
No. 49
Traveling Expenses

To obtain a deduction for traveling expenses, which form an important item in the returns of many taxpayers, certain regulations must be observed. The taxpayer is required to attach to his return a statement showing the nature of business in which engaged, number of days away from home during the taxable year on account of business, total amount of expenses incidental to meals and lodging, and total amount of "other expenses" incident to travel and claimed as a deduction. Among the "other expenses" are tips, provided they are reasonable in amount.

Traveling expenses are deductible only when the trip is on business. They are limited to such expenses as are reasonable and necessary in the conduct of the business and directly attributable to it.

Traveling expenses incurred in connection with a journey to another city to accept or seek employment are not deductible. Suburbanites who commute daily from their homes to their place of business are not permitted to deduct the cost of transportation, it being a personal expense.

Claims for deduction for traveling expenses must be substantiated when required by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, showing in detail the amount and nature of the expenses incurred.

Late filing of returns means additional tax.

A. U. Is Approved For Army, Navy Training Tieup

American University yesterday was named by the War Manpower Commission as one of 238 colleges and universities approved for use by the Army and Navy in basic and specialized war training programs.

The schools were selected by three representatives each from the War and Navy Departments and the WMC. American University has been approved for a possible contract by the Navy for its new training program, V-12.

The committee's approval does not guarantee that the armed forces will use the school, but merely makes the institution eligible to conclude a contract in giving the type of training specified, the WMC said.

At the same time, Georgetown University was listed for inspection and possible contract by the War Department for pre-medical training.

British Carrier Reconditioned With Record Speed

London, March 2.—A British aircraft carrier is on her way to an active service assignment today, on schedule and fighting fit, thanks to the Herculean efforts of a group of shipyard workers who, working day and night for 20 days, refitted the carrier with 7000 new boiler tubes —a task which usually requires months.

When the damaged carrier came into port, there were only three weeks to spare before her next assignment. The carrier could not be brought to the shipyard, so the workers took the shipyard to the carrier.

On reaching the harbor, the tubes were slung onto lighters, swung aboard the carrier and rushed to the boiler room.

The fitters who replaced the tubes lived aboard, working day and night amid a continual din. They worked 14-and-a-half hour shifts, extending the ordinary 24 hourr to 29 by this system of overlapping.

Casualties were taken ashore. There were no substitutes—the remaining workers merely worked all the harder to close the gap.

Finally, the job was done. The men stumbled ashore, utterly exhausted, dropped where they stood and slept on the dockside.

Errol Flynn's Salary Reported as $240,000

Philadelphia, March 2 (AP).—A new list of high salaries reported today by the Securities and Exchange Commission included the $240,000 paid to Errol Flynn by Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., of New York, in the fiscal year of 1942.

Other Warner Brothers salaries included $255,000 for Producer Harold B. Wallis and $252,333 for Actress Bette Davis.

Cruiser Sydney's Finish Described

Captain and Other Survivors of German Raider She Fought Reveal Details

By John A. Morosco 3d
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 2.—Back on November 19, 1941, the famed Australian cruiser Sydney, a flaming, shell-battered hulk, disappeared over the horizon after a chance meeting with what seemed to be a harmless merchantman cruising along in the South Pacific.

The entire ship's company of 645 men vanished with the Sydney.

The naval world was shocked when it learned that the dashing cruiser had gone to her death at the hands of the Kormoran (also known as the Steiermark and "No. 41"), a 9400-ton raider.

The 6830-ton Sydney had just completed 80,000 miles of battle cruising, mostly in the Mediterranean. She had survived 60 bombing attacks.

Seemed a Charmed Ship

She had helped in bombarding the Dodecanese Islands.

People were beginning to think that she was a charmed ship. Her captain, J. A. Collins, was appointed a Companion of the Order of the Bath by King George.

When war clouds gathered in the Far East the Sydney went back home to patrol around Australia.

A detailed story of how she met death is revealed here for the first time. It was pieced together from reports of Captain Detmers of the Kormoran and by others of the 317 survivors of the Nazi ship.

The American Navy is using the reports to teach its sailors to be careful in investigating strange ships. When in doubt, our policy is to shoot first and talk afterward.

The Kormoran was cruising at 10 knots, about 300 miles west of Carnavon, Australia, when she sighted the Sydney at 4 p. m. The raider turned into the sun pushing her speed to 15 knots.

The Sydney followed, approaching the Kormoran from the starboard quarter. At 7 miles she signaled with a daylight lamp, asking the raider to "hoist your signal letters."

The raider hesitated a short time and then hoisted the signals PKQI (signals for the S. S. Straat Malakka, the vessel she was impersonating at the time). The Nazis used their apparent inefficiency in signaling to lure the Sydney closer.

The Ruse Worked

This ruse de guerre worked. The Sydney came abeam about 1200 to 1500 yards from the raider and asked for further identification.

The raider made no reply and when the ships got on a parallel course the raider dropped her gun-concealing plates and hoisted the Nazi flag.

Four of her six 5.9 guns fired without warning and this salvo struck the bridge of the Sydney, wrecking this vital part of the ship and apparently killing most of her officers.

The Sydney's 6-inch guns responded furiously with a salvo that struck the raider's engine room and fuel tanks. Fire spread over the raider. The shooting was at point blank range now.

Two torpedoes sped from the Kormoran and one struck the Sydney 20 feet from her bow. Another Kormoran salvo landed amidship on the warship.

The torpedo hit forward apparently crippled the forward guns of the Sydney and her scout plane was blasted to bits with the shell-fire.

As the ships came closer the raider opened up with her anti-aircraft guns and began shelling torpedo men and gunners aboard the Sydney.

As the Sydney passed astern of the raider the Nazi ship opened up with all her guns despite the fierce fires that raged over the ship and in her engine room.

Four Sydney torpedoes missed the raider and a Kormoran torpedo missed the Sydney. Both ships were going at it hammer and tongs.

The Sydney was burning amidships and settling by the bow when she drifted off to the southeast at five knots.

1 Lasted Less Than 30 Minutes

The dying Kormoran came to a stop. In slightly less than 30 minutes, two fine ships were slaughtered.

At 7 p. m. Captain Detmers ordered his engine room crew and other nonessential hands to abandon ship. Detmers and a handful of officers left the ship four hours later and at midnight the Kormoran exploded and sank.

The Sydney disappeared over the horizon at 11 p. m. and was seen no more.

Although the Kormoran resembled a harmless Dutch merchantman, she packed a lethal punch that made her a match for a hard-hitting cruiser at close range. She accomplished what Nazi Stukas and Italian warships had failed to do in a year.

The Kormoran sank nine Allied ships before her meeting with the Sidney.

Her six 5.9-inch guns were stored in holds and raised by a hydraulic press. She had six topedo tubes, two underwater and two on each side of the ship. She carried an Arado 196 plane and a half-dozen antiaircraft guns, as well as four range finders.

The Sidney carried eight 21-inch torpedo tubes, eight 6-inch guns and one plane.

Germany has many of these raiders. She is building more. Recent reports from Norway and France say that captured Norwegian and Dutch ships are being converted into raiders as rapidly as possible.

Compo Packs Feed Troops in Africa

London (AP).—"Compo packs" of food, their contents scientifically worked out by British chemists and dietetic experts, supplemented American food supplies for the African campaign. The packs formed the major part of the 2000 tons of British rations that have been sent to the American troops in Africa.

A compo pack feeds 14 men for one day and consists of varied foods, including thin, sweet chocolate cookies which have superseded forever the flint-like army hardtack of World War I.

Canned provisions now include steak and kidney, salmon, herring, oxtail, Irish stew, fresh vegetables, baked beans, bacon sausages, cheese, margarine, jam and fruit.

Submarine Life, In Short

Barrage Bombers Push Dive Tactics to Limbo

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, March 2.—It is "barrage bombing" and "skip bombing" that are breaking the back of ground attacks and pushing the Lutwaffe's famed Stuka and dive-bombing into limbo.

For sea assaults the dive-bombers still have a place, but it is the opinion of Allied air commanders here that the Stuka is a much overrated weapon that does not hold a candle to the fighter-bomber and low-level bombers such as the American Havocs, Mitchells and Marauders.

The use of Stukas in the first days of Marshal Erwin Rommel's blast from Faid Pass may be one of the last death rattles of the craft once muchly feared in the days of the Battle of France, most Allied commanders believe.

In the first days American troops were badly rattled by Stuka thrusts in the Sidi Bouzid area, with one commander reporting "heavy damage" to his armored forces, but checkups revealed that casualties had been almost nil and that not one tank was put out of action by a Stuka bomb.

Americans React

After the third or fourth day the American troops rallied and started blasting back with ground defenses. The Stukas were not heard from in the rest of the battle.

The Germans resorted to the use of Focke-Wulf 190's and fighter-bombers in the manner first put into practice by the R. A. F. with Hurricane bombers.

As a weapon against troops under attack for the first time the Stuka has a certain amount of terror effect, but veterans such as the British Eight Army caused such a heavy toll the Germans stopped using them altogether over the battlefield and German pilots were reported referring to themselves as "suicide squadrons."

The Stuka's defect is that in bombing it comes down in a steep dive for one spot. If the troops are dispersed, those who are not directly under the plane cut loose with everything they have from the ground.

Vulnerable As Dive Ends

As a Stuka ends its dive it is particularly vulnerable as its momentum keeps forcing it down lower in an almost stationary position.

Lightly defended and slow, they are easy targets to the fighters.

Against the dive-bomber, the Royal Air Force has devised the Hurricane bomber and "skip bombing." The Hurricanes hedgehop over the country, sweeping up on troops before they are seen or heard.

Then they release delayed-action bombs which allow them to get away without getting caught in their own explosions.

Fast and flying low, they make a poor target for ground troops and once freed of the weight of bombs they are fighters, able to defend themselves.

It was Hurricane bombers that the British used to blast the German attack in northern Tunisia.

Americans use their low-flying Bostons and Havocs often for the same purposes, but in the Battle of Kasserine Pass Maj. Gen. Carl Spatz and Air Vice Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham took the lid off a type of attack best described as "barrage bombing."

All Planes Take Part

Almost every daylight bomber at the front took part. Large formations of Havocs, Mitchells and Marauders and even Flying Fortresses, loaded to capacity for the most part with small antipersonnel and fragmentation bombs, laid down what amounted to the old World War type of artillery barrage of high explosives.

Secret Reorganization of Red Army Spelled Russian Battle Success

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

(One of a Series)

New York, March 2.—What is behind the scenes of the Red army?

I have been asked that question repeatedly by persons who have been successively surprised, first by the Soviet Union's resistance to Germany, then by last winter's counteroffensive from Moscow and now by the Red army's reconquest in the Ukraine.

The answer, early in the war, was that the power of the Soviet Union, its 193 million people, Red army, navy and air force and heavy industry had been underestimated, but now it is more than that.

It is a story of reorganization that has made the Red army as efficient a fighting force as any in the world, capable of capturing this winter more than the Germans could last spring, summer and fall.

This reorganization, cutting the Red army down from a few sprawling fronts into many compact units, is credited largely by the best-informed military observers in the Soviet Union for the current Russian victories.

Formerly 3 Fronts

During the first year of the war in Russia, the Red army was divided into three fronts, the north-western, western and southwestern, commanded by Marshals Klementy Voroshilov, Semeon Timoshenko and Semeon Budenny. Each was a large, unwieldy organization, difficult to control and lacking elasticity.

Take, for the sake of an example, the German estimate that the Red army numbered 330 divisions. That meant that each marshal was commanding 110 divisions, about one and a half million men—a stupendous task under the highly mobile conditions of modern warfare.

There were some changes in the setup, some shifts in command, but for a year the organization generally remained the same.

The reorganization started last summer, after the Germans broke through the Red army's Southwestern Front, raced south to the Caucasus, east to the Volga and shattered the Russian lines.

The first indication of alterations in the Red army dispositions was given by dispatches to the military newspaper, Red Star. These had been date-lined from the fronts to which the correspondents were accredited. Suddenly, instead of "Southwestern Front," for example, the dispatches started, "Acting Army," with no designation of a specific front. Secretly, changes were affected.

Formed Into 12 Fronts

After the Battle of Stalingrad was won, the secret came out—the Red army had been reorganized into 12 fronts, each smaller, more manageable than the original three.

The fronts, running from north to south, were the Karelian, Leningrad, Volkhov, Northwestern, Kalinin, Central Briansk, Voronezh, Southwestern, Don, Stalingrad and Caucasian.

Each was commanded by a skillful professional soldier. Outstanding were Generals Filip Golikov of Voronezh; Nikolai Vatutin of the Southwest; Konstantin Rokossovsky of the Don, and Andrei Yeremenko of Stalingrad, who won the battle of Stalingrad; Leonid Govorov of Leningrad, and Kiril Meretskov of Volkhov, who broke the Leningrad blockade.

Above them served newly designated representatives of the general headquarters of the supreme command, who coordinated the actions of the fronts. Representatives of the Stawka, the general staff of the Red army, were Marshals Voroshilov, Gregory Zhukov, Nikolai Voronov and Gen. Alexander Vasilevsky.

Many military observers in Moscow believed this new organization, providing closely knit forces under strong general direction, made much of the difference in the new striking power of the Red army.

This fluid organization is constantly changing, now that the Red army is moving into new fields. The Stalingrad Front, for example, has become the Southern Front. Others will take new designations as they enter new territory, divide or combine as their lines lengthen or shorten. The principal of smaller fronts, or army groups, remains.

There is, of course, more to the story than that.

Another major factor has been the production of the war industries, evacuated to or established in the Soviet East, which have sent a constant stream of materiel to the front.

Two items have been of particular importance:

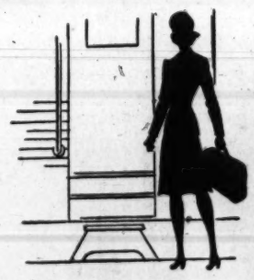
Tanks—the KV, a 46-ton monster, born at the Putilov works of Leningrad and named after Klementy Voroshilov, has gone into mass action. This machine was used largely in breaking the German lines.

Guns—Katiusha, the Soviet secret weapon, invented by Army Engineer Andrei Kostikov and nicknamed for the heroine of a popular love song, has grown a large family. This gun, about which little is known except that it works on the mortar principle, formed the backbone of the defense of Stalingrad.

Both of these instruments existed at the start of the war, but have been developed extensively, both in quantity and quality.

(Tomorrow: The Russian Soldier as a Fighter.)

WHAT! ONLY ONE ATTRACTIVE LITTLE BAG?



Thank you, Mrs. Jones, for your patriotic forethought . . .

Car space is so limited, we certainly do appreciate the thoughtfulness of passengers who carry just as little luggage as they can.

Awake to the traffic strain, and anxious to help, many people are traveling with less baggage today—taking only what they'll surely need. Best of all, they're carrying less—checking in the baggage car all parcels and luggage not needed en route. This takes thoughtfulness—for it means breaking old habits.

Passenger traffic doubled last year. Our load will increase still more this year. So the Santa Fe will be more grateful than ever for your cooperation in 1943.

DON'T GIVE YOUR BLOOD TO THE 7th COLUMN

Do you know three of the most dangerous weapons our enemies possess? They are common pocket knives, screwdrivers and chisels — carelessly used by careless Americans.

Every day, thousands of war workers cut or scratch themselves . . . ignore the fundamental rules of first aid . . . keep right on working. Result: several thousand infections . . . fifty or more hands amputated . . . ten or more lives lost!

This is but one example of the dreadful toll taken by carelessness . . . America's 7th Column. In the first year of war, 100,000 men, women and children were killed and 9,300,000 injured . . . in home, work and highway accidents.

These home front casualties cost us enough manpower to build 29,000 heavy bombers.

Will you join now in a nation-wide crusade to "Smash the 7th Column and Help Win the War"—by living safely, driving safely, and working safely?

Give it to the RED CROSS

You may be a donor if you are normally healthy and between 18 and 60. By a miracle of science, blood plasma may now be dried and kept indefinitely. To some man in uniform, your small sacrifice may mean the difference between life and death.

Price of 96 For Erie Bonds Declared Fair

Spokesmen for the Erie Railroad contended yesterday that it was good business to arrange quick sale of 14 million dollar bonds for refinancing without competitive bidding.

Testifying at an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing, John K. Thompson, vice president of the railroad, said the directors agreed on January 29 to sell the bonds at a price of 96 through Morgan Stanley & Co., New York, on the ground that the transaction was fair to stockholders and was desirable in the light of wartime market conditions.

"Weren't you endeavoring to beat the market to a fall," asked C. W. Sellers, counsel for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, an Erie shareholder.

"No," said Thompson. "We were endeavoring to sell at the most advantageous position."

Erie is asking the commission to approve sale of the bonds to be used to refund an obligation to the Reconstruction Finance Corp. Sellers and former Senator Robert J. Bulkley suggested that Erie could have obtained a higher price for its bonds through competitive bidding. Bulkley is counsel for other investment firms.

Harold Stanley of Morgan Stanley & Co. said the sale of the bonds at 96 was one of three financing plans suggested by his firm. He added that selection of the plan was left to Erie.

Carl E. Newton, president of the C. & O., said earlier that if the sale is approved "Erie will be paying an interest rate of 3.85 per cent for new money in order to pay off an equal amount of existing bonded debt which is now costing the Erie only 3.56 per cent to carry.

"In other words this financial operation would cost the Erie an additional interest charge of $40,600 per year and would require an immediate cash outlay of $1,067,500 which would not be needed if the new 15-year bonds were not now substituted for the existing 10-year bonds . . ."

Stanley had not completed his testimony when the hearing recessed until today.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—May wheat futures today sold at a top of 1.48¾, the highest in many years, and July and September contracts missed going into new high ground for the season by minor fractions.

Persistent demand for wheat futures by mills and reports that the Federal Government might call for 1,250,000 barrels of flour in the near future were responsible for the upturn. The extreme gains were not maintained at the close.

Wheat finished ⅜ to ⅝ cent higher than the previous close, May 1.47¾, July 1.48¼, September 1.49¾; corn was at the ceiling limits, May 1.00; oats were unchanged to ⅛ up, but rye lost ⅛ to ¼ cent.

Range follows:

Ocean Wave Beaten by Pops Pick in N. O. Test

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The new ownership of the Phils has laid the first egg of the 1943 season. Their attempt to bolster the club by advertising in the papers for ballplayers was a complete flop when only three candidates showed up at the team's winter office. One was a former minor leaguer, a second was a sandlotter, and the third was a one-eyed semipro outfielder from Hartford.

POVICH

At best, it was a fanciful idea. Ballplayers of big league caliber aren't on the loose these days. The thought that there might be good ballplayers who would answer an ad was completely visionary. Baseball jobs are too easy to get, for players who have talent.

The idea worked once, though, and with amazing success. That was in 1913 when Clark Griffith advertised in the newspapers for pitchers, inviting any lads who could throw hard to try out with the team. Griffith got a veritable windfall. Out of the dozen youths who reported, five of them became big leaguers. They were Harry Harper, Jim Shaw, Joe Boehling, Jack Bentley and Doc Ayers.

Those were the days, though, when the country was not blanketed with big league farm teams and unattached talent abounded. Thirty years later, there is hardly any such item as a good ball player who is not under contract to somebody. The Phils' plan was doomed before it was attempted. If the Phils had come up with even one ball player, it would have been an insult to the baseball scouting profession.

Senator James Mead of New York trapped himself between the bases in his statement the other day when he told newspapermen that he advocated the cancellation of the World Series and the big leagues' all-star games for the duration.

The idea would be, he said, to relieve the strain on the Nation's transportation system. The fact that war charities receive the leagues' and clubs' share of both the All-Star and World Series games is blithely overlooked by Meade, as is the fact that the two events could sell out any park even with tickets restricted to the towns in which the games were held, thus posing no transportation problem whatsoever.

But Senator Meade left himself open to the coup de grace with his suggestion that "My own view is that the major leagues should rearrange their schedules to permit teams to remain for longer periods in each city." Tish, tish, Senator, you haven't been reading the papers The big leagues 12 weeks ago thought of the same idea and announced they were doing just that, altering the schedules to cut travel by nearly 40 per cent by longer stays in each city.

Clark Griffith is up on his hind legs snorting defiance at J. Alvin Gardner, president of the Texas League, who voted the suspension of his league for the duration as a patriotic sacrifice to the war effort.

Gardner advocated the freezing of player contracts and abandonment of all baseball for the duration because "teams take up space on trains and in hotels that is needed for the war effort and the players could be better used in the services of the defense plants." He added that the major league club owners were asking only "to protect their investments."

"He wants us to be quitters," said Griffith. "Baseball has a job to do in this war, and no less than President Roosevelt has said so. We'll be handicapped, but we're going to fight this thing through. Baseball will take all the raps that's coming to it, and still try to operate. Gardner may be a Texan, but it's clear to me that none of his relatives were in the Alamo."

That perforated ear drum which caused Leo Durocher's rejection by the Army and forced him to return to his $20,000 a year job with the Dodgers instead of inheriting the Army's 50 bucks a month must have been a terrific jolt to the Brooklyn manager.

At the first report that Durocher's perforated ear drum had disqualified him for Army service, the temptation was to say it adds up to a heluva note and are we going to beat the Japs and Nazis by eavesdropping?

But medical authorities have explained it all very clearly. The man with the perforated ear drum has no protection against gas attack, even with a gas mask, because the stuff would penetrate through the exposed inner ear. And that the exposed ear would be highly susceptible, too, to germs and other impurities. Durocher's case may be that of a guy with an overabundance of lip and too little ear.

Marshall's Fine Gesture Tops in A.A.U.

One of the most unselfish and sportsmanlike gestures in the history of District amateur boxing today is credited to Marvin Marshall, Gallaudet student, who could have the District of Columbia A. A. U. 126-pound championship in his hip pocket if he so desired. But the guy's a real sportsman.

Marshall upset Charley Pullman of Apollo A. C. in the semifinals last Friday night at Turner's Arena. In the same semifinals, John (Cotton) Corbin, who Friday morning leaves to report to Uncle Sam's Paratroopers, upset Dickie Mullen of National Training School. Corbin, o fcourse, cannot meet Marshall for the crown Friday night and the Gallaudet towhead could insist on being awarded the title by forfeit.

But when Billy Blake, chairman of the A. A. U. ring committee, explained the situation to Marvin, Marshall immediately agreed to have Mullen and Pullman, each beaten in the semifinals, fight for the privilege of meeting him for the title which is, by rights, actually his.

Young Stops Torres

New York, March 2 (AP).—Terry Young, New Yorker (139), stopped Joe Torres, 141, New York, in the sixth of a scheduled eight-round main event at the Broadway Arena tonight.

Harris Stirs Trade Winds To Aid Phils

Philadelphia, March 2 (AP). Bucky Harris said today that his plans to strengthen the Philadelphia Phils included conferences this week with the Brooklyn Dodgers and the New York Giants; that he had arranged to talk with the New York Yankees' management about prospects in the farm system, and that he was interested in a pitcher recently obtained by the Minneapolis Millers of the American Association.

Harris would name no players, but said he "expected" the name of Babe Dahlgren would be mentioned in his talks with Branch Rickey of the Dodgers.

National Trainers Win

The National Training School Five closed its season yesterday, routing Maryland Park High, 34-24, to make it 9 wins in 12 starts since Coach M. S. Powell took over the team.

Lieut. McCluskey to Shoot For World Record Here Monday

Lieut. Joe McCluskey of the United States Navy goes after his third world's record locally and his second at Uline Arena Monday night when he competes against Greg Rice in the 2½-mile invitation feature of the tenth annual Catholic University indoor games.

From Chapel Hill, N. C., where he has been in hard training for six weeks, the veteran McCluskey has announced his intention of going all out to better his performance of last season when he paced Rice across the finish line as both shattered the world's mark of Taisto Maki in the C. U. games at Riverside.

Two years ago at Uline Arena the popular McCluskey proved the first track athlete ever to set a world's record locally when he won the Steeplechase event of the Washington Athletic Association's games.

Lieutenant McCluskey, who has survived the rigors of the toughening course at Chapel Hill, N. C., and who has assisted in physical training, declares that he will be in the best shape of his life for the Catholic University games.

"I look for Georgetown University's Dave Williams, a grand distance runner, and some of the others to set a hot pace for Greg and myself. But you can rest assured I'll be out to win, and I won't let up a minute," he said.

Williams, one of the country's greatest collegiate 3-milers, already is in hard training with the Georgetown track team, while several of the out-of-town entries also will be set for their supreme efforts in this competition.

For America's Sake

Weiss Asks Congress To Put O. K. on Sports

Solon Says Spectator Athletics Necessary To Morale of Soldiers and Civilians Alike

For morale's sake, a Pennsylvania Representative told the House yesterday, Congress should go on record as sanctioning wartime spectator sports and opposing undue curtailments, especially of baseball and football.

The plea came from Representative Samuel A. Weiss, Glassport (Pa.) triple-threat man—he's a lawyer, a football referee and a Congressman.

"Happy soldiers make better fighers just like contented workers make better production men," said Weiss, Duquesne 25. "It is my firm conviction that soldier and civilian morale, demands that the Government permit spectator sports to continue for the duration."

Quarterbacking his own drive, the Democratic Representative said he'll offer a resolution for Congress to indorse wartime sports, and disclosed he has written President Roosevelt asking for a conference. "Whether baseball and football are to continue for the duration is now in the hands of your administrative leaders here in Washington," he told the President.

Weiss Was Referee

Weiss was a referee in the National Football League last fall. His speech came a day after Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, an officer of the Buffalo club in the International Baseball League advocated cancellation of world series and all-star baseball games for the duration, to help the transportation situation. Mead said he had conferred with many club officials seeking to keep "competitive sports alive with the least possible drain on the transportation system."

Weiss said one soldier wrote him:

"I am willing to die for my country, but for God's sake don't stop the sports that make America great."

Only last week, he observed, over 75,000 spectators watched England beat Wales at soccer.

Md. Boxers Defend Title At Syracuse

Five University of Maryland boxers leave today for Syracuse, where on Friday and Saturday they will attempt to retain the Terps' Eastern Intercollegiate ring championship against full teams of eight men from Army, Coast Guard Academy, Penn State and favored Syracuse.

Carrying the Terps' colors will be Bill Kambouris, 127 pounds; Tommy Jones, 135 pounds; Alex Bobenko, 145 pounds; Bob Schwartz, 155 pounds, and Len Rodman, heavyweight.

Lost to the Terps, who dropped only one match in seven starts this year under their new coach, Tom Campagna, are Ed Reider and Ray Ciccone, who only three days ago answered the call to colors, following the footsteps of Maryland's great 165 and 175 pound undefeated scrappers, Jack Gilmore and Herb Gunther, who were called earlier.

The Old Liners fared well in the draw, drawing no less than three byes. The pair to see early action include Bobenko, who will meet Wells of Syracuse, and Schwartz, who tackles Doolittle of Army. Rodman, defeated only once this year and that by Bernie Cody of C. U., will have the hardest task. He figures to get by the winner of the Burdette (Army) vs. Richardson (Coast Guard) scrap without too much trouble.

Pin Highlights

"Pie" Juliano topped the Greenway Commercial League with a 162 single as a 378 score by Ralph DeSantis took set honors. Ed Heller's 126-377 and Buddy Fuller's 145-368 were other highs . . . Bob Hall's 146 and a 389 set by both Dean Roper and Bill Buckner were best individual totals in the Georgia Avenue League at Silver Spring. Takoma Ambulance and Civil Service split team honors after respective totals of 609 and 1723 . . . Winners in the men's division of the Red Cross handicap at Hyattsville were as follows: Jordan Bryan, 773—$50; Carl Rosentreter, 757—$7.50; Paul Bartleit, 758—$4.50; Bill Winslow, 731—$2.50, while $3.50 went to both Myles Quail and John Clancy for high scratch set of 638 and high game of 256, respectively. Women winners were: Mary Holmes, 681—$7; Dorother Workman, 670—$5; Agnes Collins, 654—$3; Inez Bryan, $4 for high set of 561 and a like sum to Minnie Brown for high game of 127 . . . Harry Costin, long identified with semi-pro baseball in the District and formerly with the Bureau of Engraving, is the new manager of Petworth Bowling Center. He succeeds Joe Connell, who resigned to engage in defense work . . . Rolling the first 400 set in the eight-year existence of the Bureau of Ships League, Tom Dow burned up the Penn Recreation drives and capped a 160 single with a nice 404 set. His teams, the Shellbacks, also set records with a 892 game and 1663 set.

Pie Traynor And Pirates Part Company

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, March 2.—Harold (Pie) Traynor, one of baseball's greatest thirdbasemen, and the Pirates have parted company—breaking ties of 23 years—it was disclosed today.

TRAYNOR

First intimation that Traynor was no longer a member of the Bucs' official family came when it was discovered his name was missing from the list of scouts on the club roster. He had been a scout since Frankie Frisch succeeded him as manager in 1939.

The club said today that Traynor had been given a free hand to look for another post since the advent of Frisch. Traynor did not contact the club at the minor leagues meeting and the club, feeling he no longer wished to remain with the Pirates, dropped him from the payroll.

At his Cincinnati home, Traynor disclosed that he had no immediate plans for the future.

Traynor applied for a commission with the Army last October but was rejected because he was more than 38 years old.

Bears Crush Lions, 12 to 1; Set Record

By the Associated Press

Hershey, Pa., March 2.—The Hershey Bears pounded out a 12-to-1 victory over the Washington Lions here tonight. The Bears set a new all-time record for the league in "goals scored in a season" with tonight's game, and need only a tie or win to clinch the pennant in the American Hockey League.

The Bears have scored 215 goals this season. The previous record for a season was 214 goals, made by the Philadelphia Ramblers in 1938-39, and the Bears have five more games to play.

Lauzon, Kilrea and O'Neil scored in quick succession in the opening period before Smith gave the Lions their lone tally. Levandoskil made it four for the Bears before the bell.

In the second period, Moe Johnson, Levandoski and Hergert chalked up four more for the Bears. In the final period the red light blinked four more times as Lauzon, Kilrea, O'Neil and Sorrell contributed another brace of four points.

Lions Here Tonight

Hoyas, G. W., A. U. Facing Road Games

G. U. Battles Colgate, Eagles Meet Loyola Tonight; Colonials Start Tourney Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

It's Raleigh, N. C., for George Washington; Hamilton, N. Y., for Georgetown, and Baltimore for American University today as the District college basketball teams pursue tournament titles and bids in a gala road windup to a busy season.

Georgetown left yesterday morning at 10 o'clock for the up-State New York town where the Hoyas meet an in-and-out Colgate University club tonight. Georgetown should win this one but the Hoyas run into real trouble tomorrow when they tackle Syracuse at Syracuse.

After a one-day layover on Friday Georgetown plays Penn State Saturday night at State College, Pa., and as the Lions are unbeaten since the Hoyas walloped them here the game looks to be the second toughest of the season for the Hoyas. If G. U. wins all three for a record of 20 victories and 3 defeats for the season, they will probably get a bid to either the National Invitation Tournament or the N. C. A. A. The school received a feeler from the latter group last week.

G. U. to Raleigh

George Washington leaves at 1:45 this afternoon for Raleigh, N. C., where the Colonials meet William and Mary tomorrow afternoon in the first game of the first round of the Southern Conference Championship.

Coach Art Zahn, a squad of 10 players, George Lentz, trainer, John Busick, graduate manager, Charles Wallace, publicity director and John Baker, head football coach will make up the George Washington party. The conference court tournament is one of the feature sports events of the year and a majority of the coaching staffs from all member schools gather for meetings, schedule arrangements, etc.

George Washington figures to pull a comeback after the showing against Georgetown and the draw appears to be made to order for the Colonials. William and Mary lost its three star players and first two reserves to the Army and, despite the jinx the Indians have held over G. W. in the past, the Colonials certainly should win this time and qualify for a semi-final meeting with either North Carolina State or Davidson. Duke is the odds-on favorite in the opposite bracket.

A. U. Plays Loyola

American University, with a new all-time District scoring champion in George Zuras, who totaled 377 points in 19 games, will meet Loyola tonight in the first round of the Mason-Dixon Conference playoffs in Baltimore. Western Maryland and Delaware open the card.

Loyola is another school hard hit by service losses and midyear graduations, and the Eagles stand an excellent chance of upsetting the defending champions and fourth seeded host team. American U. is in a better spot for a semifinal berth than the other two District schools, Catholic University and Gallaudet, who play first-round games tomorrow. The Cardinals meet top-seeded Washington College, winner of 10 straight, while Gallaudet plays Randolph-Macon again.

Maryland University, deprived of a Southern Conference berth for the third straight year by finishing below eighth place, is through for the season, having finished with an over-all record of 8 and 8.

Walker and Musto To Clash at Uline's

Ahearn Reenters Promotion Field With Show Scheduled March 12

Buddy Walker, hard-hitting Columbus, Ohio, Negro who kayoed Corpl. Buddy Knox in his last showing here, has been signed to meet Tony "Baby Tank" Musto of Chicago, when Promoter Goldie Ahearn comes out of temporary retirement Friday, March 12, at Uline Arena.

The District Boxing Commission, which only two weeks ago refused to sanction a Tony Musto-Al Hart bout on February 22 for Ahearn, yesterday gave the match its blessing, with certain provisos.

The commission's official statement:

"This permit shall be valid only if ice be removed from the Arena, or, in the alternative, that the ice in the area of the ringside, including the ice under the ring, be covered with matched wooden flooring elevated not less than four (4) inches above the surface of the ice, and subject to approval by the Health Officer, D. C."

The commissioners, who are being sued as individuals by Ahearn for $106.224.08 following the December 8 rumpus at Uline Arena for alleged over-stepping their authority resulting in loss of revenue for Ahearn for taking its now famous stand that seats on flooring on boards over ice is injurious to spectators' health, hastened to have its communique okayed by Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer for the District.

Ahearn assured the commission the ice under the ring would be covered. Prices are scaled on the Turner standard, $1.20 general admission and $2.40 ringside, including tax.

K. O. Koverly, Emil Dusek Top Mat Card

George (K. O.) Koverly will come back to Turner's Arena tonight to meet Emil Dusek in the headline wrestling battle.

Koverly returned to the Arena last Wednesday after a two-year absence to wallop The Yellow Mask. It was a rough battle all the way, a give-and-take scrap, with Koverly body slamming the hooded man to win in 30 minutes.

Of particular interest is the bout between The Yellow Mask, mysterious hooded grappler, and Lou Plummer, the Baltimore villain.

Plummer was substituted yesterday for Tommy O'Toole, when Promoter Joe Turner decided that what he needed was a "tough villain" to throttle the wild masked man.

The semiwindup finds Max Krauser opposing Dick Lever. In the curtain-raiser at 8:45 Milo Steinborn will tackle Jim Austeri.

3 in Congress Hail Viereck Decision

Wheeler, Nye, Hoffman Take Floor To Exult Over Supreme Court Decision

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Three of the men whose congressional franks carried propaganda for the paid Nazi agent, George Sylvester Viereck, took the floor yesterday to exult over the Supreme Court setting aside his prison term.

And—although Viereck and 33 others are yet to be tried on a charge of conspiring against the armed forces—the senatorial colleague of one of these men declared the Nazi agent was "persecuted" and proposed to pay him damages.

Viereck was master of a huge propaganda machine which used Capitol Hill connections to fight aid to England and support Axis foreign policy. Council of concealing these activities, he was sentenced to 2-to-6 years in prison. The Supreme Court on Monday held that the Foreign Agents Act was not properly stated to the jurors who convicted Viereck, so he was given a new trial. Five Justices agreed; two dissented.

Stone Scolded Maloney

Chief Justice Stone in his opinion scolded Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney for reminding the jury their country was at war with Viereck's recent employers.

Senator Wheeler of Montana saw this decision yesterday as evidence of the court's determination "to preserve civil liberties and fight wartime hysteria." Maloney deserved the rebuke, Wheeler added.

Twenty thousand of Wheeler's franks were supplied to the Nazi propaganda organization to carry as many copies of his "Stay Out of War" speech through the mails postage free. This deal was handled by Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, George Hill, on June 2, 1941, when Hill was on the Nazi payroll. Active in promoting Wheeler's speech for America First in Los Angeles on October 2, 1941, was the Nazi Party secret agent, Krans K. Ferenz, who is now facing trial on a charge of plotting sedition with Viereck and others.

Hoffman Blasts Maloney

Representative Clare E. Hoffman of Michigan hailed the Viereck decision as evidence that "Maloney isn't fit to be a prosecuting official of the United States." He quoted at length from the Supreme Court opinions.

Hoffman voiced these views while making again his frequent charges that reports of the Nazi network conspiracy case have been "used by Dillard Stokes, The Washington Post, The New Republic and others "to call in question the loyalty of members of Congress" like Hoffman. He said he was not defending Viereck, whose propaganda organization got 30,000 Hoffman franks to carry the isolationist speech, "We Burned Our Bridges Once," in May, 1941.

In like manner, Hoffman assured the House that, when he attacked Maloney and charged that grand jury secrets leaked out, he did not mean to defend Viereck's alleged coconspirators. Several of those circulated Hoffman's "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech along with revolutionist and subsersive matter of their own.

Hoffman implied that he himself was privy to the secrets of the grand jury room, saying, "if an accurate transcript of the proceedings of the grand jury is produced, I will show that Maloney wilfully and deliberately failed to state the truth to the grand jury."

Senator Nye of North Dakota declared yesterday that Viereck's victory in the Supreme Court showed "we have moved out of the field of hysteria and are getting back to a world of reason and justice."

Viereck's organization used Nye franks, too, and on January 14 this year Nye told the Senate that most of those accused of conspiring with Viereck "have seemingly done no more than I and others of us here."

Nye's colleague, Senator Langer of North Dakota, told the Senate yesterday that he would ask for "a full and complete investigation of this persecution" of Viereck and for a committee to find out how much Viereck spent defending himself, with a view to paying him for this and for his time in jail.

"Whatever relief Congress may be able to give Viereck," Langer said, "will be inadequate to wipe out the wrong that has been done."

D. C., Maryland And Virginia Men Listed as Killed

The name of one Washington man killed in action in Europe was released by the War Department yesterday, in announcing names of 435 United States soldiers who were casualties in the Alaskan, European, North African, South Pacific and Southwest Pacific areas.

HICKMAN

The local man named was Master Sergt. Bernard F. Hickman, 35, husband of Mrs. Susan V. Hickman, State Department employe who resides at 4831 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest, and son of Mrs. Jessie C. Gordon of 4835 Hutchins Place Northwest. His death was first announced February 7 by his family.

Marylanders listed as killed in action were Sergt. Donald L. Lauck of Secretary, in Africa; Sergt. Martin G. Bacon, jr. of Baltimore, in Europe, and Pvt. Edward O. Spicer of Cumberland, in South Pacific.

Two Virginians reported killed in action were First Lieut. James W. Pfueger of Roanoke, in Africa, and Pvt. First Class Elmer F. Rakes of Stuart, in the South Pacific.

Education Group Cancels Parley

The National Education Association, desirous of helping with the transportation problems throughout the Nation, announced yesterday that its regular summer convention, usually attended by thousands of teachers, would not be held this year.

A meeting of the representative assembly will be held at Indianapolis, Ind., in the latter part of June, it was reported at the same time.

Msgr. Ryan, Murray Speak At Howard U. Charter Fete

Celebrating the seventy-sixth anniversary of its founding, Howard University yesterday observed Charter Day with addresses by the Right Rev. Msgr. John A. Ryan, director of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, and Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O.

Msgr. Ryan spoke yesterday morning on "The Place of the Negro in American Society," quoting the encyclical of Pope Pius XII, issued in 1939, in which he said, "In the field of religion and education we know the Negro people need special care and comfort and are very deserving of it."

He evaluated the various forms of possible association between whites and Negroes based on the moral law, deploring the economic motive of exclusion of Negroes from employment by unions of vital interest to both races.

Oppressed minorities were urged to avoid violence, to be vigilant and constant in struggling to remove disabilities, to practice patience, and fail not to regard and encourage assistance from men of good will.

Murray, speaking last night at the nineteenth annual Charter Day dinner, discussed a postwar period, in which the C. I. O. is seeking to prevent a return to business methods that caused the collapse of 1929 and in which the productive capacity of the country may be used to the full in peacetime as in war.

Annual alumni awards for distinguished postgraduate achievement were presented by Dr. Mordecal W. Johnson, university president, to Dr. Orville L. Ballard, Waverly Hills, Ky., in medicine; to Miss Zora Neale Hurston, Daytona Beach, Fla., in literature, and to Lieut. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, Washington, D. C., in public service.

Engel Escapes Serious Injury In Car-Train Crash

Representative Albert J. Engel (Republican) of Michigan was heading toward Washington from Akron, Ohio last night nursing severe cuts and bruises suffered when his car was struck by a train in Cuyahoga Falls, near Akron, yesterday.

Engel, who has served five consecutive terms from the Ninth Michigan District, was treated at an Akron hospital and boarded a train to return here. He serves on a special subcommittee investigating the costs of Army equipment.

Seditionist Attacks War As 'Unpopular'

Robert Noble, West Coast seditionist, attacked the war as "unpopular" when he protested in the District Court yesterday against trial of himself and 33 other defendants for a conspiracy against the armed forces.

For praising Hitler and deriding the war effort, Noble was convicted of sedition in the Los Angeles Federal Court last July. He was convicted in October of violating the California Subversive Organization Act. Now he is in the District Jail awaiting trial in the Nazi network conspiracy case.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins yesterday heard debate on the constitutionality of the proceedings and Noble asked to be heard in his own behalf. The justice agreed, and the well-dressed, smooth-shaven Noble launched an eloquent speech.

The laws against sedition, said Noble, were manifestly infringements of free speech. The first laws of this kind were repealed in 1798, Noble said, and the country got through several wars without them. "But in 1917," he said, "we were dragged into a war which was unpopular, as this one apparently is, and the Sedition Act of 1917 (under which he is accused) was passed to deal with criticism."

This law and a peacetime act of 1940 forbade efforts to stir up mutiny and disloyalty in the Army and Navy.

Also attacking the validity of the law yesterday was Emil Morosini, jr., New York lawyer for the German agent, George S. Viereck. Making his first argument here since he was ousted from the District Court bar for making unseemly statements in court during Viereck's foreign-agent trial last March, Morosini claimed the sedition laws violated the fifth amendment.

Another to speak was Albert Dilling, husband of the alleged conspirator, Elizabeth Dilling, who said the sedition laws operated as "class legislation" because there were no Communists among those accused of plotting with Mrs. Dilling and the Nazis.

Special Prosecutor O. John Rogge is scheduled to discuss the constitutionality of the sedition laws today.

Kelley Surrenders

John Eoghan Kelley, 50, alleged Franco propagandist, surrendered in Los Angeles yesterday and was placed under $5000 bond for his return to Washington for trial on an indictment accusing him of violating the Foreign Agents Act.

Roosevelt's Better But Cancels Conference

President Roosevelt conferred yesterday with Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, and had luncheon with Economic Stabilizer James Byrnes and Postmaster General Frank Walker.

Although he has recovered from the slight illness which kept him in his residential quarters at the White House since last Wednesday, Mr. Roosevelt canceled his regular Tuesday press conference.

Postlude

Philadelphia Orchestra's Program Skillfully Amended

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra on Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Soloist: Joseph Szigeti. Program: Two Choral-Preludes—"Schmuecke dich, O liebe Seele" and "Komm, Gott, Schoepfer, Heiliger Geist" (Bach-Schoenberg), Violin Concerto No. 5 in A Major (Mozart), Violin Concerto No. 1 in D Major (Prokofiev), "Night Soliloquy" (Kennan), "Till Eulenspiegels lustige Streiche" (Strauss).

By Ray C. B. Brown

Arturo Toscanini's illness brought disappointment to the crowded audience in Constitution Hall last evening at the fourth subscription concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra, and the absence of the distinguished guest conductor necessitated changes in the announced program. Manager Harl McDonald, however, did his best to compensate for the unavoidable alterations by engaging Joseph Szigeti as soloist, thus substituting a master of the violin for the magisterial director. Eugene Ormandy met the emergency with competent calm and conducted in a manner which elicited an enthusiastic response.

BROWN

The readjusted program began with two of Bach's chorale preludes orchestrated by Arnold Schoenberg without any 12-tone eccentrities. Scored for large orchestra with impressive masses of sound, they were a rather overpowering introduction to the gentle A major violin concerto by Mozart. Gently and delicately did Joseph Szigeti play the solo part in this delightful work, applying his artistic finesse and his polished style to a suave exposition of the melodic lines. His preservation of the Mazartian style was meticulous in phrasing and accents, and marked by a keen appreciation of the composer's individuality.

Five of Mozart's six violin concertos were written in the year 1775—a remarkable feat even for a genius. They seemed to have flowed spontaneously from his imagination, for the sixth concerto, written two years later, does not compare with them in quality. The A major is perhaps the finest of the five, which are all in the French manner ending with a rondeau. It teems with poetic ideas, and although it has faults of routine working-out in the first movement, the adagio and the finale are among his most charming pages.

The intermission gave one time to adjust oneself for the contrast between Mozart and Prokofiev, whose D major violin concerto bristles with mischievous difficulties for the soloists. Needless to say, Mr. Szigeti met them with a virtuosity before which they wavered and gave way. The concerto is a prime example of a salient characteristic in Prokofiev—his Mephistophelean pose. It has an eerie atmosphere, produced by the large amount of scoring for high strings with weird glissandi and by occasional portentous rumblings in the brass. The music is deliberately ironic, witty in a consciously diabolical way, and imbued with a strange fascination.

"Night Soliloquy" introduced to Washington the talented 30-year-old American composer, Kent Kennan. By this lovely tone-poem one is reminded of Keats, who forever found joy in things of beauty. It is a nostalgic reverie for solo flute, the silvery tone supported by murmurous strings and a few soft chords on the piano with a magical effect of nocturnal peace brooding above a homesick spirit. The writing is sensitive and evocative in a high degree and discloses a rare faculty of intuition in the composer.

6500 Telephone Workers Granted $2 Weekly Raises

Minimum pay increases of $2 per week have been granted to 6500 employes of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. pending approval by the War Labor Board.

The Federation of Telephone Employes asked the increase at the 1st of the year. The company denied it at that time. A month ago Lucien F. Rye of the United States Conciliation Service, Department of Labor, stepped in to settle the controversy. Settled Monday, the agreement provides for a minimum $2 increase, retroactive to January 1, 1942.

Four departments of the company are affected—plant, traffic, commercial and accounting—in Washington, nearby Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

Asthma Sufferers Sleep Fine When Free From Mucus

Choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruin your sleep and rob your blood of vitally important oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. Within a very short time after the first dose, Mendaco ingredients start circulating thru the blood, thus reaching the smallest as well as the largest Bronchial tubes where they usually quickly help liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. In fact, Mendaco has proved so successful in helping thousands of sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma that it is sold under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. So get Mendaco from your druggist today.

Family Shelter Canned Food 'Declarable'

The local office of OCD yesterday advised those who had accumulated stocks of nonperishable foods in their family air raid shelter rooms to declare them when applying for new ration books.

The national Office of Price Administration, informed of the release, expressed some surprise, although the release was based on an OPA document of February 14. An OPA spokesman seemed to doubt whether issuance of such advice on March 2 would be effective, inasmuch as those who were going to declare excess stocks had already done so, and point rationing had been in effect since Monday.

Poses a Puzzle

The last paragraph of the OCD release stated that canned goods, coffee and sugar now stored in emergency feeding and housing billet posts also would come under rationing and would have to be declared. This last statement presented a puzzle which even the chief counsel of OPA couldnt solve. Nobody knows on whose books the public stocks held by the EFH group could possibly be declared. OCD was less worried. Officials there simply said they must be declared and that in a bombing an appeal to OPA would result in replenishment.

The OCD release reads in part:

"Since point rationing has gone into effect, the question arose whether such emergency stocks should be declared when applying for new ration books.

"The question was put to OCD Director James M. Landis who conferred with OPA officials, then wrote the following letter to officials of the Metropolitan Area:

"'We have discussed this matter with the Office of Price Administration, and they have definitely stated that such declarations must be made, and that canned and processed foods maintained in home air raid shelters will be considered in the same manner as any other canned and processed foods on hand at the present time.'"

New Courses Listed

Meanwhile, yesterday the OCD also announced new courses in bomb reconnaissance under the direction of Lieut. Col. M. H. Resni Coff of the Ordnance Department. Representatives from war industries, railroads, public utilities, local military and naval units, OCD, fire departments, industrial institutions and State, county and city police are especially invited to take the course. Courses will be held March 8, 9 and 10 in the courtroom of the County Service Building, Hyattsville, Md., from 6:30 p. m. to 10:30 p. m., and March 17, 18 and 19 at the Arlington County Courthouse, Arlington, Va., from 6:30 to 10:30 p. m.

The Washington Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa will meet tomorow art 8 p. m. in the Mayflower Hotel, principally to elect officers for the coming year, it was announced yesterday. The main speaker will be Hector David Castro, Minister from Ecuador.

Throngs of Vasilakos' Friends to Honor Memory at Rites Today

When the late Steve Vasilakos established his peanut stand in front of the White House in 1905 he had hardly a friend in America. At 2 p. m. today hundreds will attend his funeral at SS. Constantine and Helen Church, among them representatives of the Nation's outstanding charitable and patriotic organizations and the Greek government in exile.

Father Thomas Daniels will officiate at the old graystone Orthodox Church at Sixth and D Streets Southeast with the traditional Greek service for the dead. Soterios Nicholson, Steve's good friend and adviser in matters legal and politic, will deliver the funeral oration in English, reading letters from the many organizations unable to send personal representatives.

Among those attending the funeral will be:

Edward B. Hitchcock, representing the war saving division of the Treasury Department, in appreciation of Steve's contribution to the war effort in the sale of $50,000 worth of war bonds.

Edwin N. Lewis, assistant director of the District of Columbia Community Chest and Community War Fund, paying homage to Steve's contribution of one or two days receipts from his peanut pushcart each year.

A uniformed guard of honor from the District Chapter of the American Red Cross, to whose annual drive Steve each year pledged a day's receipts. In addition, the Red Cross appreciates Steve's contribution in talking up to his countrymen the importance of giving to the Red Cross.

Tasso Antonopoulos, press secretary of the Greek Legation, which feels that Steve brought about a better understanding between Americans and Greeks through his continued charity and humility.

Representatives of the American Hellenic Educational and Progressive Association, whose convention in New York last September voted Steve "the common people's man of the year."

And a host of friends, American and Greek, who had always known Steve as their "common people's man of the year."

They will hear the chanting of the Orthodox service and they will hear Nicholson pay homage to his friend and outline his reasons why Steve's pushcart should be given to the Smithsonian Institution. Nicholson said yesterday he would present his proposal to the Smithsonian in the form of a brief, containing excerpts from the eulogistic editorials which have been written about Steve since his death.

Then, many of the assemblage will join the funeral procession to Cedar Hill Cemetery.

W. and J. Sloane Mark Anniversary

The 100th anniversary of the founding of the W. & J. Sloane Co., which has a store here at 1217 Connecticut Avenue, will be held at 7 p. m. today at the Washington Hotel.

The local store of the century-old Sloane company was established in 1904.

A hundred persons are expected at the banquet, including W. E. S. Griswold, jr., the president; Edwin B. Hayes, vice president, and John Sloane, chairman of the board of directors, all of New York City; the local manager, Henry J. Zilliox, who has been with the concern 42 years, and Edward J. O'Connor, associate manager and a member of the firm for 18 years.

Certificates of service will be awarded.

2 Churches Mark Milestones Tonight

Two prominent local congregations will mark milestones in their careers with special programs tonight.

First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest, "mother" church of its denomination here, will celebrate its 141st anniversary at the weekly prayer meeting at 8 p. m.

The congregation of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, 3400 Lowell Street Northwest, will begin the silver jubilee of its founding with a banquet at 6:30 p. m.

"WHEN YOU COME BACK TO ME..."

I know you will come back to me. I've never doubted that, ever!

And when you do come back, you will find, just as you left them, everything your letters tell me you hold dear. I will be wearing the same blue dress I wore the day you went away. And on my arm the silver bracelet you gave me last April on our anniversary.

And, waiting for you, the children will be first to hear the sound of your step on the walk, and the quick way that you and only you open and shut the old white gate.

How they will run to greet you, far out-racing my own swift step, meeting you with shouts and laughter, before I have even reached the door!

Inside, by the warm fire in the living room, you'll find your easy chair, your footstool and your slippers, just as they always were each night before you went to war.

When you come back to me, you will find nothing changed. Those left at home promise that.

Here in your town, your children are still free to sleep and laugh and play . . . still free to look to the sky, clear-eyed and unafraid.

Our house still stands, white and lovely as it always was, and down the street the maples march straight and tall, unwithered by the heat of war! And every Sunday, steeple bells still ring and in our church we still sing hymns to God.

I've told the children, and I tell myself, this is what you're fighting for! These are the big and little things worth waiting for. The things that make our lives worth living, that make this war worth winning.

We are so proud of you.

Proud that you are making sure that hate and greed and tyranny will never rise to threaten us again.

And we are proud to make our own sacrifices, knowing that they will help to bring you back to us sooner.

Back home to the same town, to the same job you liked so much...to the same America we have always known and loved . . . where you can work and plan and build . . . where together we can do the things we've always dreamed of . . . where we and our children are free to make our lives what we want them to be . . . where there are no limits on any man's, or any woman's, or any child's opportunity.

You've said, "That's the America I want when I come back . . . don't change that, ever . . . don't let anyone tamper with a way of living that works so well."

Never fear, darling—that's the way we all want it. Everything will be here, just as you left it, just as you want it . . . when you come back to me!

Dedicated to the loved ones of America's fighting men who, here at home, are fighting their fight . . . keeping for them until they come back, the same America they knew before they went to war.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be overworked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels; so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Government Cafes Hit by Rationing

Government cafeterias will be hit hard by food rationing. They won't be given preferential treatment. Their supplies of rationed goods will be cut around 50 per cent, which all means that Federal workers must change their eating habits drastically. However, a spokesman for the Welfare and Recreation Association said yesterday at that moment (1) no increase in prices of plate lunches was planned, (2) cafeterias would not restrict operating hours (it has been rumored that rationing would force abandonment of breakfast and dinner service), and (3) the one meatless day a week would be maintained indefinitely, but this policy, of course, will be determined by supply.

KLUTTZ

Meantime, the cafeterias will put on a campaign to get Federal workers to eat more of the unrationed foods. Oatmeal and other cereals will now be available throughout the day and you'll be asked to eat them for lunch and dinner. Little-known cuts of meat will be introduced in stews. The nutrition value of unpopular foods will be advertised and vitamin-packed vegetables will be pushed. Few fancy foods will be available. You may not be able to get what you want, but no one will go hungry, and Administration pressure will keep the prices down.

Postmaster General Frank Walker, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is supposed to be the Administration's arch-politician, but yesterday he told his employes, "If I had my way the Postmaster General would be a career man. It would be a fine thing for the service and the country." He made the significant statement when he swore in two top career men—Kildroy P. Aldrich as First Assistant and Jesse Donaldson as chief of inspectors. C. B. Uttley, another career man, is slated to succeed Donaldson as deputy first assistant.

That proposed War Cabinet we've all read and heard so much about is in actual fact a reality. Members are James Byrnes, Bernard Baruch, Harry Hopkins, Admiral William D. Leahy and New York Justice Sam Rosenman. This group, within the past few days, has been trying to solve the complex manpower problem. It has met with Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard on the farm and labor situation; with Paul McNutt and military officials on the overall manpower picture, and with members of Congress on possible legislation. If this isn't a super-Cabinet then what do you call it? Incidentally, it's reported that the creation of this group, though it may be informal, has caused a split among the so-called "palace guard."

Test of Strength

An attempt will be made Friday by the Senate Civil Service Committee to report out a war duration Federal pay raise bill. The Friday meeting will test the strength of the bloc that prefers a flat bonus to the Administration's full overtime pay plan which would have the effect of increasing overtime pay by 7.4 per cent. The bonus plan appears to have strong backing among the Senate group, Senator Mead, who's handling the bill, believes the Administration plan will be supported in principle. The present overtime pay bill expires on April 30. Nearly all witnesses made strong arguments for the Administration bill during the hearings which closed yesterday.

The present act and the proposed bill limits overtime pay to the first $2900 of salary which would amount in actual cash to $870. National Federation of Federal Employes President Luther Steward urged that this ceiling be lifted to $5000. Charles I. Stengle, representing the American Federation of Government Employes, urged that base pay of all Federal workers be raised 15 per cent in line with the "Little Steel" formula. Steward also supported a revision upward of base pay. Like Arthur C. Stein of the United Federal Workers of America, both Steward and Stengle opposed a bonus. Edgar G. Brown, United Government Employes president, urged a $1500 minimum base pay. He asked the committee to write in an amendment which would deny benefits of the bill to unions that discriminated against Negroes.

That order which put 700 employes in Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts on a 45-minute lunch period was rescinded yesterday. But imagine this: some cantankerous officer in the bureau is now trying to find out the names of the employes who started the petition protesting against the change. Surely the Navy isn't trying to suppress the right of petition? . . . OPA Boss Prentiss Brown yesterday laid down a new employment policy which calls for (1) the employment of very few, if any, draft-eligible men and (2) the employment of more women. Many of OPA's draft-eligible men probably will be released to the military under the new policy . . . His friends are giving Trust-buster Thurman Arnold a testimonial dinner at the New Statler on March 9. A long list of notables will speak.

Prison Walls Are No Barriers

Prisoners in Manhattan jails and detention centers within the next six weeks may have to bring along their ration books if they want to eat, it was announced by Peter Amoroso, commissioner of corrections. Prisoners already are required to part with ration coupon 17 if they need new shoes, Amoroso said.

Little Brother Speaks

Annapolis, Md. (A.P.).—Members of the Maryland House of Delegates considered yesterday a resolution which would urge the National Congress to "cease and desist forthwith to hinder, impede, obstruct, and delay the war effort" and to stop "playing practical politics in these critical times."

Power Rate Hearing At Impasse

OPA, Reinforced By 4 Top Federal Agencies, Fails To Make Headway

By Roger Young
Post Staff Writer

Reinforced with the prestige of four larger Federal agencies, the OPA yesterday failed to make any ground against the Public Utilities Commission in the opening session of hearings on the Potomac Electric Power Co. annual rate adjustment case.

Even before the training of the big guns of the Treasury Department, the Public Buildings Administration, the Department of Justice and the Office of the Director of Economic Stabilization on the PUC's regulation of local power rates was revealed to be only a part of the OPA strategy, the PUC majority had ruled that the hearing would be conducted according to its rules of procedure rather than at the terms of the agencies.

Sliding Scale Attacked

The specific issue, to which the PUC consistently ruled the hearing must be confined, is the setting of the 1943 electric consumer rates under the provisions of the sliding-scale agreement that has been in effect since 1924. Under this agreement, it was indicated during the hearing, a rate reduction of at least $315,540 would probably be effected.

The OPA, however, speaking through Utilities Counsel Harry R. Booth, wanted a rate reduction of at least two million dollars and immediate reconsideration of the entire sliding-scale arrangement. The PUC had promised to hold an investigation of the sliding-scale arrangement as soon as the present hearing is concluded.

"Now Sacred Cow"

Thurman Hill, counsel for the Treasury Department Procurement Division started the day with a vigorous attack on the sliding-scale system, which he termed "no sacred cow" and "nothing that God hath wrought." Continuing he said, however, that the Treasury would be content to let Booth, who had argued the similar rate case of the Washington Gas Light Co. through long drawn out hearings to its present stalemate in the courts, speak for that agency.

Maxwell Elliott, representing PBA, likewise indorsed Booth, and William Kueffner, appearing at the last moment to file for intervention for the Department of Justice on unstated grounds, stated that he would go along with the other Federal agencies.

Bitter opposition to what he termed Federal encroachment on the regulatory duties of the PUC was voiced by Harry S. Wender, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations. Wender challenged the battery of Government lawyers to prove that they were preempting the space at the counsel table in the interests of the citizens of Washington.

Flanagan's Ruling

The discordant morning session ended with a ruling by Flanagan that Treasury, PBA, the Department of Justice and the Midcity Citizens Association would be allowed to intervene in the case but only on the issue as defined in the rate hearing order. He allowed the OPA to intervene—but "not as a matter of right."

All of the interventionists objected to the limitation.

Many Questions Put to Rent Chief Are Provocative

A plaintive feminine voice reached Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell over the telephone yesterday.

"How many people are supposed to be in one bathroom, anyway? Don't I get any privacy?"

Being rent administrator certainly has its drawbacks. Hardly a day passes that some irate and fond parent doesn't write or telephone in this wise:

"What are you going to do about that ban on children in apartment houses? What are we supposed to do with our children, drown them?"

P. S.—Answers: (1) Yes; (2) no.

Visiting Science Students Call at Capitol, See Wallace

Ray Schiff of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Miss Gloria Lauer of Ames, Iowa, science scholarship winners, meet Vice President Wallace.

Forty wide-eyed young seekers after knowledge, whose special aptitude for scientific studies gave them a chance to attend the five-day Science Talent Search Institute here and compete for $11,000 in prizes, visited their Nation's Capitol yesterday and talked with Vice President Wallace.

Decorous and well-behaved, the 40 young people, 29 boys and 11 girls from 16 States, gathered in the Vice President's room at the Capitol for one of the great events of their week's trip here.

Obviously at home with the young students, Vice President Wallace told The Post that the annual pilgrimage here of the Nation's youth was always a pleasure to him because he saw in it the "seeds of so much progress for such a long time."

Two of the young people, pretty Miss Gloria Lauer of Ames, Iowa, and Ray Schiff of New Rochelle, N. Y., had a special opportunity to chat with the Vice President as they posed for a picture with him.

It was a secret known only to the prize committee and a reporter at that moment that the two selected were the winners of the Westinghouse Grand Science Scholarships, $2400 each, which were awarded at a banquet last night at the Hotel Statler.

Miss Lauer not only came from Mr. Wallace's home State, but her father, a professor at Iowa State College, had the Vice President's son Bob in his class.

The boy from New Rochelle confided to Wallace that he had written an essay based on the Vice President's speech, "The Century of the Common Man." The youthful scientist said it was the "most inspiring" speech he had ever heard.

Miss Lauer was accompanied by Representative Paul Cunningham (Republican) of Iowa. The young people, who came from California, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Wisconsin, visited their congressional delegations yesterday. Some of them were still talking about the beautiful new Congresswoman from Connecticut.

At a banquet at the Statler Hotel last night the youthful scientists heard Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general, U. S. Public Health Service, say that their special skills could be well utilized in the war as well as after it. The two grand prize winners were notified of $2400 award, four years college tuition; six other boys and two girls were awarded $400 scholarships and $3000 more in scholarships was awarded. Westinghouse Electric Co. sponsored the search.

Two District boys received honorable mention among the 300 high school boys and girls, from whom the 40 were selected. The two are John Allan Gunnarson of 3519 Patterson Street Northwest and Alan Yoffey Naftalin of 305 Raymond Street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Suspected Thief Taken On Coast

Jewell Ashby Gould, 38, alias James Bennett, described by the District Attorney's office here as one of the "smartest" jewel thieves ever to operate in the District, has been apprehended in Los Angeles, Calif., and will be brought here soon.

Specifically, Gould was arrested on the West Coast on a warrant issued here charging him with violation of his parole from Lorton Reformatory and the theft of $1075 in war bonds from the apartment of Miss Eunice Whyte, 200 R Street Northwest, which occurred last April.

Upon his arrival here Gould also will be questioned in the theft last May 9 of $9000 in jewels which police records show were stolen from the home of Leonard Schloss, operator of Glen Echo Amusement Park, in the Alban Apartments.

He was indicted here in 1935, along with his wife, Eula Mae Bennett, for transporting stolen goods across State boundaries.

His arrest came in New York the following year when he was apprehended and held for several weeks in connection with the death of Max Silverstein, a noted New York diamond merchant. When those charges were dropped against him he was removed to Washington. He was sentenced here in 1938 to one to five years on the local charges.

Woman Suspect In 1931 Slaying Awaits Trial Here

Mrs. Edyth Dodsworth Lane, 42, suspected accomplice of Frank Jordan, in the 1931 Garden T Shoppe murder of Mrs. Elizabeth Jaynes, remained at the Women's Bureau last night as detectives sought witnesses for her trial.

Assistant Detective Chief Robert J. Barrett, who returned the woman here from Berkeley, Calif., Sunday, revealed that he intends to question Jordan this week. The latter is under life sentence for the fatal shooting and is imprisoned at Lorton Reformatory.

The detective captain said he would "start at the bottom in the investigation today. He was "tied up" yesterday, he declared, and was unable to spend any time with Mrs. Lane.

D. C. Budget Cut Asked By President

A net cut of $334,966 in the District budget estimates for 1944 was recommended to Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt, on the basis of revised estimates submitted by the Commissioners.

The changes will bring the total local budget request down to $55,009,698, instead of the $55,344,664 originally asked of Congress.

The entire reduction is to be sliced out of street improvement and construction items in the highway fund, which had already been cut more than three million dollars from 1943 expenditures. The corrected estimate of highway fund outlays for '44 will stand at $2,446,489.

The items cut down involved chiefly the resurfacing, paving and curbing of local streets, together with drainage and gutter construction work.

A total of eight items were pared down, adding up to aggregate decreases of $473,966. This was partially offset, however, by the addition of $141,000 to funds for a number of other street projects, including work to be done on Dalecarlia Parkway Northwest. These two totals figure to the net cut of $334,966.

The President's letter of transmittal said that the revisions had been submitted to the Budget Bureau by the Commissioners together with a statement "that the changes recommended are necessary to meet contingencies which have arisen since the transmission of the budget for the fiscal year 1944."

Correction

Mrs. Ada Lusby, 55, of 776 Tenth Street Southeast, was reported in yesterday's Post to have been killed by illuminating gas at 1310 Eleventh Street Southeast. This was an error which The Post regrets.

Joseph H. Berry, 63, was found dead at the address from gas which also felled Mrs. Lusby. She, however, was revived by fire rescue squadsmen and last night was said to be "out of danger" at Casualty Hospital.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald certified that Berry's death was accidental.

Traffic Toll In District Rises to 17

Aged Victim Dies; Inquests Clear Motorists in Two Casualties

D. C. traffic deaths this year . 17
Deaths this date last year . . 24
District total last year 108

A 70-year-old Negro died yesterday at Gallinger Hospital from injuries suffered in an automobile accident February 21, and two motorists were exonerated at inquests in two weekend traffic fatalities.

Arnold McCray, 2412 Seventeenth Street Northwest, succumbed to brain and internal injuries. He was knocked down at Sixteenth Street and Kalorama Road Northwest by an auto said by police to have been operated by Harry C. (Curly) Byrd, 53, president of the University of Maryland.

Inveestigators released Byrd at the time of the accident and last night were expetcing him to come to the Accident Investigation Unit office for questioning. He lives at Calvert Hills, Md.

McCray's death brought the Washington traffic death total to 17, 7 less than at this date last year.

Acquitted by a coroner's jury were Alfred H. Danley, 49, of Arlington, Va., and Alfonso F. P. Rubino, 21, of 3008 Sixteenth Street Northeast.

The former was opeating an automobile by which Joseph V. McNary, 63, of Takoma Park, Md., an engineer with the Public Roads Administration, was struck and fatally hurt last Friday. McNary died at Emergency Hospital Sunday.

It was testified the victim ran into Danley's machine from behind a bus on Tenth Street Northwest near Constitution Avenue.

Rubino was cleared of blame in the death of Patrick J. Maguire, 77, of 3825 Kansas Avenue Northwest, a retired grocer. He was struck at Vermont Avenue and L Street Northwest Sunday morning and died at Emergency Hospital.

Despite the fact the inquest absolved Rubino in the death, he still must stand trial at Municipal Court on a charge of failing to give full time and attention to the operation of his vehicle, police stated.

Court Upholds Order Barring Nylon Refund

In the first test case of its kind here the Municipal Court of Appeals for the District refused to acknowledge the contention of the Office of Price Administration that the Price Control Act required that persons convicted of violating price ceilings were automatically ordered to pay a fine of $50 or more to the person making the complaint.

The decision was rendered on appeal from the Municipal Court which had ruled that Miss Patricia Hall, 22, an employe of the War Department, was not justified in her claim for a $50 forfeiture from the Stella Ladies Shop, 1926 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, based on the contention that she had paid $2.50 for a pair of "nylon hose" which was 85 cents more than the ceiling price.

The lower court's decision which contended Miss Hall was only entitled to the 85-cent overcharge, was upheld in the decision written by Associate Judge Nathan Cayton, with Chief Judge William E. Richardson and Associate Judge Andrew Hood assenting.

The decision said the Municipal Court of Appeals had accepted the case on appeal because of the importance of the question involved and had accepted the offer of the administrator of the OPA to intervene in behalf of the plaintiff because of a section of the act which allowed such intervention.

In effect the decision stated that despite the fact that the Price Control Act permitted such a forfeiture on the part of violators who exceeded a price ceiling, it did not make it mandatory upon the courts to impose such a fine.

D. C. House Body Meets Friday to Speed Pay Bills

Looking toward speedy enactment of pay-raise legislation for District police, firemen and school teachers, the House District Committee is to meet Friday on the local wage bills passed by the Senate Monday.

The session, which also will see final organization of the committee and probable action on the Unemployment Compensation bill, was scheduled for 10 a. m. by Chairman Randolph.

Randolph said there probably would be no need for further hearings on the bills, since hearings were held on the police and fire bills last session, and on both measures in the Senate. He hoped to report the bills out next week.

Ballerina Here Rhapsodizes On Horse Meat as Dancer Diet

Krassovska Grows Nostalgic Over Parisian Steaks

Nathalie Krassovska, who is to the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo what Salvador Dali is to a furlined teacup, paused long enough in the Raleigh Hotel yesterday to flex her leg and arm muscles and explain rather disturbingly that horse meat was a fine thing indeed.

Horse meat steaks, with the right sauce and treatment, the ballerina told reporters in her Leningrad-Paris-New York accent, are, or used to be, the source of much of her stamina and energy. She illustrated this stamina and energy by working her arms up and down, and with a quick show of leg muscles. She repeated this for a photographer who said he was a late comer.

Miss Krassovska, who will appear with the Ballet Russe tonight and tomorrow night at Constitution Hall, nearly neglected entirely the delicate art of arabesquing when a reporter told of a friend who could make a horse-meat stew that would drive away her worries and fatigue before and after performances. One of the things which make Paris dear to her heart, she said, is horse-meat steaks.

It was only through the combined effort of several interviewers that Miss Krassovska left the subject of horse meat and got on to more esthetic ground. Unlike the traditional ballerina, Miss Krassovska entered ballet school, not in Moscow, but in Paris, and not as a 4-year-old but at the age of 12. This was in 1932, she said, and since then every day has been one of practice and more practice. Only through this routine, she asserted, could one twirl like Nijinsky and succumb beautifully as a swan. This and a little native talent, she said.

The bright little ballerina, native of Leningrad, first danced under the name of Leslie. Later, after dancing in European capitals, she assumed the name of Krassovska, which, she disclosed, was invented by her grandmother.

D. C. Pupils' Patriotic Work Goes on Display Tomorrow

"Schools at War," an exhibit of illustrations, statistics and models contributed by pupils to the Junior Red Cross, war savings program and civilian defense, will be presented tomorrow and Friday 2 to 5 p. m. at three District schools.

Twelve schools will be represented, Leon L. Perry, supervising principal of Division 11, said. Exhibits will be at the Bundy School, 429 O Street Northwest; Cleveland School, Eighth and T Streets Northwest, and Young School, Twenty-fourth Street and Benning Road Northeast.

They will instruct other airplane observers in this locality.

Navy to Dedicate Seabee Training Center April 4

The Navy announced yesterday that new training center for its construction battalions, the Seabees, will be dedicated April 4 at Davisville, R. I., and named for the late Rear Admiral Mordecai T. Endicott, whose widow and four daughters reside here at 1855 Wyoming Avenue Northwest.

near Providence, Camp Endicott.

Recently constructed on a site whihc can accommodate about 13,000 men, will be used to train construction battalions which have had preliminary training at Camp Peary, Va. Admiral Endicott was widely known as the "father" of the Navy's Civil Engineer Corps.

Mrs. Endicott, the Navy said, will be invited to the dedication exercises as a special guest of honor, and invitations also will be extended to their daughters, Misses Annie, Elizabeth and Louise Endicott and Mrs. Mary Valentini of the Wyoming Avenue address; Miss Grace Endicott, Paterson, N. J., and Miss Edith Endicott, Sweet Briar (Va.) College.

Belmont Tenants Protest Notice To Quit Quarters

Management of Belmont Gardens, boarding hotel, 1759 R Street Northwest, Monday claimed at a hearing by the Rent Control Administration that it has been operating at a loss of $2000 monthly.

Sixty-odd tenants appeared to protest 30-day notices to vacate April 1. Counsel for the petitioners said a request for increased rates would be abandoned and that they would pursue the alternative of closing the establishment, discontinuing both rooming and boarding facilities.

Testimony was presented by Mary Giovinazzo, bookkeeper for the firm, to show that during January the total expenses were $9940 and the revenue was $9202, or a loss of $738 exclusive of rent. Thomas W. Sandoz, real estate man, testified that rent of the seven buildings in the project at $1795, added to the $739 operating loss, made a total loss of $25,533. The hearing will continue at 2:30 p. m. today to hear arguments of counsel.

Federal Pay Hearings Concluded

Senate Civil Service Committee to Get Overtime Bill Report Friday

By Robert W. Harvey
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Civil Service Committee will receive recommendations on Federal overtime pay legislation Friday from its subcommittee which has been holding hearings on the Mead pay bill, Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York said yesterday.

The subcommittee, which Mead heads, concluded its public hearings on the measure yesterday noon after a final session with representatives of United States employe groups.

An executive subcommittee meeting is to be held at 10 a. m. Friday, under tentative plans, to decide on the course of action it will recommend to the full committee. The full committee is then to meet immediately afterward, at 10:30, to begin consideration of the legislation.

Several Changes Possible

It was indicated that the subcommittee would approve substantially the same bill as that which is before them, although Mead indicated that several changes might be made. The measure now calls for full time-and-a-half compensation for all time over 40 hours a week, and provides a 15 per cent raise for workers whose jobs are not adaptable to overtime work.

At yesterday's concluding hearing the subcommittee was told that 30 per cent of the employes who left the Federal service during the past year would have stayed if the overtime bill had been in effect. The estimate was made by Arthur Stein, assistant secretary of the United Federal Workers of America, who declared that the pending legislation would both cut down the exodus of Federal employes and boost the morale of those who stay. He also urged that the principle of premium pay for overtime be made a permanent Federal policy.

$2900 Limit Opposed

Elimination of a provision limiting to $2900 the amount of annual pay on which overtime may be figured was urged by several witnesses, including Luther C. Steward and Charles I. Stengel of the National Federation of Government Employes and A. J. Cardinal, president of a machinists' union at the Springfield (Mass.) Armory. It was argued that this limitation tended to drive highly-trained and higher-paid technical experts into private industry, where they could obtain full overtime compensation.

Steward—who approved of the main provisions of the bill, along with all other witnesses—asserted that it would place United States employes "on a parity" with workers in private industry and would wipe out pay inequalities within the Federal service.

Several minor changes were urged, including a provision to bring into the bill the custodial employes of the postal service who are not now covered.

All witnesses rejected the idea of a flat wartime bonus instead of overtime pay, although many said that adjustments in the base pay scale of the classified service should be made soon in addition to the overtime payments.

Speedy action was also urged, inasmuch as the temporary bill now in effect expires on April 30.

Medal Won By Arlington Naval Flier

Lieut. George C. Duncan, 26-year-old Navy flier of 2305 South Pierce Street, Arlington, Va., has received the Air Medal from President Roosevelt for distinguished service in aerial combat during the recent Aleutian Islands campaign, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

DUNCAN

The citation which went with the medal stated that Lieutenant Duncan, while engaged in a spotting mission under most hazardous conditions, was attacked by an enemy fighter. With cool courage and utter disregard for his own personal safety, he successfully fought off and damaged the enemy and completed his mission," the citation added.

A native of Tacoma, Wash., the young flier graduated from Annapolis in 1939 and was stationed with the fleet until August, 1941, when he went to Pensacola, receiving his wings there about a year ago. On August 31, 1941, he was married to Miss Agnes Wirt Tawresey, now employed with the Bureau of Personnel, Navy Department. She lives at the Arlington address with her father, Capt. A. H. Tawresey, assistant budget officer of the Navy.

And One Flew West

By Anne Tedlock Brooks

"The story thus far: Judith Nichols, primary flight instructor at Graves Field, is in love with handsome, devil-may care Jinx Atwood, also an instructor at the field. There is uncertainty in her feeling for Jinx, however, because of his persistent attentions to the glamorous Cherry Mason, secretary at the flying field office. Jinx disparages that relationship, saying that he wouldn't marry Cherry if she were the last woman on earth. At a solo party for new students, to which Jinx takes Judith, she knows further doubts when she sees the obvious heartbreak from which Eleanor Sinclair is suffering as a result of a broken romance with Jinx. To please her brother, Jack, who dislikes Jinx, Judith goes on a picnic with him and Janet Hayes and one of her students, Hugh McAllister. She doesn't encourage Hugh, despite his avid attentions, but later she feels a little resentful when he begins taking out Eleanor Sinclair.

CHAPTER XVIII

Judith frowned in the dark. Eleanor Sinclair was the one who was likely to be put in her place, she thought, smiling a little to herself.

When they stopped at the post-office she jumped out and mailed the letters, then ran back to the car. A long low roadster shot suddenly around the corner and she stepped back just in time to avoid being struck.

Judith gasped. Jinx was driving, and tucked securely within the shelter of his arm and smiling up at him was Cherry Mason. They did not see her. She felt so weak she could hardly open the car door.

She began to talk quickly, so that Blair would not think anything was wrong. Why was Cherry with Jinx? Was that his business that had to be taken care of tonight? Hot tears stung her eyelids, and she shivered. Suddenly she said, "Let's get Johnny and go to the Shuffleboard for drinks. Maybe there'll be some of the kids there and we can dance a little."

"Good idea. What happened to your date?"

"I'm going to break my date," Judith said deliberately.

She called Jack from the office and told him that she wouldn't be home until late, that she was going out and have herself a big time.

"Are you all right, Judy?" Jack asked her in alarm. "Your voice sounds so funny. Are you with Jinx?"

"No. He'll probably show up. Will you just tell him for me that I'm sorry that his business kept him so late!"

"You're breaking your date? Why?"

"You can probably guess, Jack."

"I'll take care of it. It will be a pleasure." Jack's voice was filled with satisfaction, and Judith shivered a little as she replaced the receiver on the hook.

Blair was watching her intently. A little worried frown etched a line between her brows. Judith turned to her and said: Johnny ready?"

He answered from the next room. "In a minute." He came to the door, and added: "You gals get your faces on. Say, what's the matter? You look as if your best friend had suddenly turned on you!"

Judith said in a bright little voice: "On the contrary." Her eyes were full of unshed tears, but she talked fast to cover up. "Hurry, Johnny. We want to dance. The Shuffleboard's full of kids and music."

She knew Blair had seen Cherry and Jinx. Suddenly a thought struck her. Suppose that Jinx had been out on a business appointment and just ran into Cherry, and picked her up? But that was too incredulous. No, Jinx had postponed his date with her, so that he could see Cherry earlier in the evening.

Johnny turned out the lights in the office and they went to the Shuffleboard. Laughter and bright music floated out of the dance pavilion windows. The lights were softly, romantically dimmed and the couples were calling for an encore as the Sinclairs and Judy came in.

Someone hailed them and then it was "Hi, Johnny!" and "Hello, Judith and Blair!" Smiles and quick handshakes and gaiety.

"I want to see Mom," Judith said, leaving the others after a moment and going over to the fountain.

Hail the Gardener

One of the best things about gardening is the beautiful dream of abundance you have in mind when you strike the first blow with the hoe that is to lead to long shining rows of fresh, unrationed vegetables right at your own back door. As you start, you are urged on by the strange tang of fresh air —the first you have smelled in several months. You will make the rows a little longer than you had intended and probably will increase your original estimate by a row of sweet corn. You will be unbearable company for your apartment-dwelling friends, and you will compare gardening notes with strangers in the seed stores at the drop of a hat. You will gloat over the farmer-like precision of your rows and furrows as they wait for Mother N. to get in her good work with the seeds. Every morning you will race the early bird to the garden patch in order that you shall be the first of the family to report the initial appearance of a green spring that might be carrots—or lettuce.

Before long you will discover that the same Mother N. who is working on your seeds, also populated the world with a lot of unpleasant characters whose main purpose in life is to destroy your private vegetable counter. Then out with the spray gun and the bug poison, out with the wire to fence out the rabbits and the neighbors' chickens. After 'em, friend, you can lick 'em!

Don't let the pests get you down; your reward will come and you'll feel like the goddess of the harvest when the crops are coming in. Squash to the left, tomatoes to the right and a gourd or two to brighten the general scene (and to hang with a tassel or red peppers in the kitchen like grandmother used to do). Of course, those nongardener friends will be avoiding your company until you have harvested your crop, canned it and finally stopped talking about it, but you can win them back. It's easy, just present them with a jar of home-canned tomatoes.

'New' Kind of Pneumonia Is Known as the Virus Form

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

This week the newspapers carry a somewhat confused and sensational story about a new kind of pneumonia that is called "cat pneumonia." The story obtains its point from the supposition that the disease is transmitted to human beings from cats. An instance is cited in which a patient came down with an unusual form of pneumonia after nursing a sick pet cat, also one where a healthy cat came down with pneumonia after being around a sick child.

This form of pneumonia has been named virus pneumonia and has been known to the medical profession for several years. It is not particularly different from other forms of pneumonia except that the germs which are present in the other forms are not found in the virus pneumonia cases.

In one epidemic all the cases occurred in infants, secondary to whooping cough and measles. In another series of cases occurring in adults, the disease was characterized by a racking cough, little or no sputum, high fever and a slow pulse, X-ray shadows which were out of all proportion to what was found by the stethoscope, and a prolonged course terminating by slow fall of temperature.

The patients are left very weak, but only about four deaths have been reported to date. In fact, only about one out of ten patients become critically ill, most of them running a fairly mild course.

If the cat transmission idea is correct, this will be the second kind of pneumonia which we have encountered in recent years transmitted by pet animals to human beings. The first was psittacosis, or parrot fever, which was prevalent several years ago and undoubtedly was transmitted from pet parrots who became sick with nasal discharge, cough and fever and transmitted the condition to their owners who fondled them too often in a sympathetic attempt to comfort them. Since the institution of quarantine on pet parrots and parakeets at immigration ports, the disease has nearly disappeared.

In both of these pneumonias a virus origin is suspected. We connot tell a virus by the usual bacteriologic methods, but a virus infection causes the formation of peculiar cells in the part affected and these have been found under the miscroscope in both the cat and parrot type of virus pneumonia.

However, what is theoretically simple in human life is often practically very complicated, and while it might seem quite reasonable to ask people not to fondle their pet cats when they show evidences of respiratory infection, this is one of the things that is easier said than done. At least, children have sense enough not to do it when ordered. Adults should also take the warning that a sick cat had better not be put on the bed of a baby in order to make it feel as if it were being given a little more attention than usual.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There are few things so irritating to parents as to be unable to command obedience. They want to speak and have the child obey. Guidance, persuasion, tactfulness, in fact, indirect methods of getting obedience, carry no satisfaction for the forthright parent. He or she wants the satisfaction of uncompromising victory.

The following are two situations illustrating beautifully the folly of expectations.

Judy, 3-year-old, was asked to pick up her blocks. Knowing this was a ceremony which preceded bedtime, she said "I can't, I can't." Her mother listened with growing irritation and finally said tartly, "If you say that again I'll slap your mouth." Immediately she felt very foolish, especially when the child whispered, "I can't, I can't," thus putting her on the spot.

The mother having seen her mistake did not think it necessary to cry through her thoughtless threat but said briskly, "This is the way to pick them up," and without more ado helped the child to do that. The incident was closed.

"One evening," continued Mrs. B. W. L., "my husband amused Judy by putting her on a high shelf again and again. When he was tired and wanted to read he told her this was the last time.

"But Judy kept crying, 'Put me up again, Daddy,' which so interrupted his reading that he said, 'Enough is enough. If you say that again, I shall spank you.' Of course she said it again and he spanked her and so and on until both were terribly upset and I had to enter the picture.

"My husband thinks he gained his point, but she whispered to me, 'But, Mummy, I did want to sit on the shelf again.'

"I admit she is stubborn, but won't you say something to guide us?"

To now her own mind is an asset to any child and is the stuff of which strong personalities are made. Force used with any child will get force in return. As the child grows the conflicts grow more frequent and the struggles longer.

Persuasion and guidance work well, as does indifference to what is annoying you. Of course the child wanted bedtime advanced and more play with father. If she had not exhbiited this reluctance to be separated from your company, you would be pretty meaningless to her.

You took the right path. Daddy could have continued reading with the explanation that "Of course you like this, we'll do it again, tomorrow." Then indifference to further pleas.

Indirect control of a child is easier than making an issue of everything which displeases you. There are too many issues and our authority is weakened by the demands upon us to enforce it.

It may carry some satisfaction to the parent to bark an order and have it obeyed, but a deaf ear to much that is annoying makes our authority more telling when it must come into play.

Our leaflet, "Obedience and Punishment," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

The Victory Gardeners

THE SMART SET

"I haven't seen you for so long!"

"Well, I've simply been rushed to death getting ready for my victory gardening."

"Snoots have some very smart things. Say, tell me—are you going to wear slacks or a dirndl?"

"Slacks. They're much smarter."

"Yes, except when you bend over . . . I think the dirndls are very smart. They're so peasantish."

"Have you seen the big Maud Muller hats Sniffs are showing? They're terribly smart."

"No, but I saw their little blue overalls. Piped with red! And with red, white and blue suspenders!"

"How darling! Say, I just met Louise Preen. She's going to garden in shorts."

"She DOULD! She'll probably plow up her front yard so she can hoe her sweet corn there."

"Well, I'm all ready now, except my sun goggles."

"Marvelous! I bet you feel patriotic."

"Well, of course I'm doing no more than my duty—say, you know what would be smart?"

"What?"

"To get a pair of those little overalls and a cute little checked gingham shirt and a little red bandanna for the neck. It would be just like a real farmer!"

"It would be the smartest thing in town!"

THE DIRT FARMERS

"Are you having a victory garden?"

"I should say so! That's right down my alley. I was raised on a farm."

"So was I . . . that is, I used to visit my uncle every summer on his farm.

"My grandfather had a farm and I used to go out and help pick potatoes and things."

"I used to help gather the eggs . . . and . . . and . . . well, do a lot of things."

"What I liked best was helping make the cider."

"Yes, and playing with the little colts in the pasture."

"I love animals. Once I had a little pet chicken. You know I wouldn't mind turning the garage into a hen house and raising chickens."

"They're a lot of work. I know all about it from helping my aunt gather eggs. She had hundreds of white Holsteins."

"Holsteins? Aren't they cows?"

"I don't think so. Well maybe these were white Poland Chinas. Anyway I know-what it takes to raise chickens."

"Well of course any kind of farming's hard work. I know from experience."

"So do I. And I want to tell you a lot of these people who are putting in gardens are going to have a mighty hard time later on—when the bugs and the weeds come."

"I'll say they are. I really feel sorry for them."

"So do I!"

THE NATURE LOVERS

"I can hardly wait to start my victory gardening."

"Me either. I have this great longing to get back to the soil."

"Me too. And to get out and feel the sun and the wind and the rain on my face."

"Yes, and to see the dew on the grass . . . and to feel the soft pressure of Mother Earth on my feet."

"I've always loved the outdoors. It just does things to me."

"Me, too. Then I get such a thrill out of seeing things grow."

"Isn't it marvelous! Just to think you can plant a little seed in the ground and a potato or something will come up."

"It's one of nature's miracles."

"I believe this whole gardening program's going to transform our lives."

"Absolutely! . . . Have you gotten your seed yet?"

"No, I—I've just been too busy with my shopping and everything."

"That's the way with me. But I'm going to get started soon. A man's coming to see me tonight about doing the work."

How a Food Expert Plans a Menu

Miss Marie Mount, dean of home economics, Maryland University, left, serves cheese souffle to Miss Eleanor Enright, regional nutrition representative, Federal Security Administration. This dish made according to Miss Mount's recipe, given on this page, provides an appetizing, nutritious, main dish made entirely of unrationed foods

By Martha Ellyn

If you are having a difficult time hurdling food changes you will be glad to know the way that Miss Marie Mount, dean of Home Economics, Maryland University, meets the challenge. This food authority knows that besides appeasing hunger that it is necessary to serve meals that meet the daily food requirements.

Martha Ellyn

Her wisdom in planning an impromptu dinner was revealed to me yesterday. I called to ask her what problems she might be having in adjusting her meal planning now that we have rationed foods. Straightaway she invited me to come up for dinner several hours later and she would give me a first-hand picture of her way with foods. When asked what general plan she had for planning meals she replied:

"I'm eating simple dishes made of unrationed foods. I am making certain that the menus include the necessary daily foods."

As we all know, to insure ourselves of good nutrition we must eat something from each of the following groups of foods each day. When you check Miss Mount's menu you will find that her menu included the necessary daily foods.

DAILY FOODS

1. Milk and Milk Products—Fluid, evaporated or dried milk and cheese.
2. Oranges, tomatoes, grapefruit or raw cabbage or salad greens.
3. Green and Yellow Vegetables—Some raw, some cooked, canned or frozen.
4. Potatoes, Other Vegetables and Fruits — Raw, dried, cooked, canned or frozen.
5. Bread, Flour and Cereals—Natural whole-grain or enriched.
6. Meat, Poultry, Fish or Eggs, or dried beans, peas, nuts.
7. Butter and Fortified Margarine.

Dinner Menu

Cheese Souffle
Boiled New Potatoes in Jackets
Tossed Green Salad
Corn Muffins Butter
Grapefruit Cup Coffee

The recipe by which Miss Mount makes her souffle is very simple. Following are her directions:

CHEESE SOUFFLE

Melt ¼ cup butter, margarine or other fat and stir in ¼ cup flour. Gradually add 1 cup milk and cook about 5 minutes, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Add 1 cup grated American cheese, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon mustard, stirring until it is melted, and remove from heat. Gradually stir in 4 well-beaten egg-yolks and then fold in 4 stiffly beaten egg-whites. Turn into greased casserole or baking dish and put in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 50 to 60 minutes or until delicately browned and firm to touch. Serve at once. Garnish with parsley if desired. Approximate yield, 6 portions. Milk may be thickened with 3 teaspoons quick-cooking tapioca instead of flour.

Girl Who Came Recently to Work for Government Is Tempted by Loneliness to Accept Married Man's Invitation to a Date, Even Though Shocked by Idea

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am one of the young, inexperienced stenographers from a faraway city, now working in Government service. In appearance, I am no Veronica Lake. I could not be called "glamorous." I don't know many people here and I spend too many "empty, lonely leisure hours," (to quote one of your recent correspondents). Your column is supposed to be counselor and guide to girls like me; and after reading all those letters last week about the "boss-secretary" setup in business, I feel encouraged to present my problem.

Every part of the country has its own social customs, and some of the girls in the Government department where I work say that it is okay to go around having dinner, etc., with married men, so long as it isn't an "affair." Just what do they mean by "an affair?" Where I come from(any girl who would have dinner or a date with a married man would be considered "not nice." If a girl went out with a married man a couple of times, people would certainly think they were interested in each other and becoming more so; and it would be considered "an affair."

Has Heard Much Talk Of 'Office Flirtations'

Most of the businessgirls who wrote you last week seem to pride themselves on their respectability; and yet they seem to think, at the same time, that anything goes,—so long as they don't spend a weekend at Atlantic City with a married man. Of course, I hear no end of talk in the office (just as you said), about the dates the girls have. Some of the girls are pretty "mouthy" about the attentions they get from married men. They even laugh about the boss calling up his wife and telling her he has to work that evening, or have a conference that will make him late for dinner, when he is really going out with one of the girls. Also, these girls show off boxes of candy, and other gifts like stockings or sweaters and bags,—just as your column said. Two or three of them even showed checks around, saying "the old man" had told them to get themselves "some little thing."

At home, we were always taught that "nice girls" didn't accept presents from men, even unattached men, who might be just starting to court. Nobody even thought of a girl taking a gift from a married man. There is so much of this "office flirtation" going on in our division that I feel very confused and a little lost. I am very lonely and a little homesick, and while I don't want to be a prude and miss any good times I might have, this kind of thing seems pretty cheap and nasty to me.

My problem is this: A married man in another office has been noticing me. He goes out of his way to jolly me, and yesterday he asked me: "How about a date some time?" Then today he said: "I mean that about a date. All you have to do is to say when." I am not at all attracted to him. He is lots older than I am, but I am awfully lonesome. I am not the kind of girl who would have a "love affair" with any man, married or single; and I feel guilty just at the thought of running around with another woman's husband, even for a few dinners or dates. But if I don't go with this man, he is the kind who would pick out someone else, who would be worse for him and his wife than I would be. So what shall I do? CONFUSED.

What Kind of Person Are You Going to Be?

DEAR CONFUSED: Look at your problem this way: Here you are, for the first time in your life, away from home, standing on your own feet and privileged to decide for yourself the kind of person you are going to be. Your first big discovery, while getting your bearings, is that many of your associates subscribe to expediently scrambled standards of behavior which strike you as being "cheap and nasty." But it also seems to you that these people, in following the course of least resistance,—letting principles go by the board while they snatch at crumbs of self-gratification—derive more day-by-day enjoyment of life than you do, who incline to believe (as you were taught) that there are clean lines of demarkation between right and wrong conduct, and that in order to be happy, successful and respected, one must "keep to the right." And so, at the first whisper of temptation to abandon your credo and sample the fruit of their "eat-drink-and-be-merry" philosophy, you are teetering perilously toward surrender.

What does this extreme susceptibility to demoralizing influence connote? It suggests to me that you haven't a nickel's worth of "courage of conviction," as yet; and that, if you go against your grain (or conscience), to play the aimless game of racketeer-flirt with married men, you probably will fare much worse, in the long run, than those casually hard-boiled young women in your office environment whose example you would be uncertainly trying to imitate; and who do have the courage to act boldly on their tough conviction that they are "a law unto themselves," and that men of every status and classification are their natural prey. As they play the game, the man is the sucker; but since the role of scheming opportunist or brazen hussy is foreign to your nature and training alike, and your relation to your associates more or less that of "lamb among wolves," you may be sure their game is not for you. To try to play it would be to throw yourself for a terrific loss—of self-respect, sane perspective, sense of security and purpose in life. And, considering your easily impressionable temperament, might also lead to heartbreak:—since in your loneliness and hunger for masculine companionship, you probably would become desperately attached, in very short order, to almost any man you happened to take up with. Which ought to restrain you, of all people,—and doubly so in these circumstances,—from "dating" a married man.

Hold to Your Standard Of What's Right for You

The thing for you to do is to resolve, now and forever, to stick by your standard of what is right,—on the durable philosophy that instinct (or protective intuition) tells you it's right for you, regardless of what others may do. And the way to reinforce that resolve, in relation to men, is to assign yourself the leisure-time job of doing war work with a semi-social flavor,—work that brings you in contact with eligible, unattached men. One avenue of approach is through the U.S.O. party programs,—about which Miss Mabel Cook of the local Y. W. C. A., (telephone MEtropolitan 2100) would be glad to tell you. Or by signing up as a junior hostess with the Stage Door Canteen;—and talk to Mrs. Elizabeth Love, captain of junior hostesses, (telephone EXecutive 1519) about that. Or by affiliating with one of the half dozen leading churches here that specialize in recreational programs for servicemen and Government girls. For information on that score, telephone DEcatur 3132, the Washington Federation of Churches, of which Dr. Oscar Blackwelder is president. Dr. Blackwelder is pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, and a generally beloved helpful friend of all young persons who turn to him for guidance in this community.

SHOP AND RUN—

By Marianne

Has anyone seen an umbrella frame without a cover, or one that has ripped beyond repair? If so, don't throw it in the junk heap—there is still much life in those old ribs!

Today's shopping find proves that there's even "something new under the rain"—a cover for your umbrella and it takes only a minute to put it on. Just remove the old cover from the frame, place the stick of the frame in the crystal tip that is in the center of the cover, tie the threads which are on the seams, and snap the caps over each rib. There you have a new umbrella without going through the tedious process of trying to make a cover that fits or buying another one when your old frame is still in perfect condition. Buy a cover to match your new spring outfit—not a bad idea in Washington weather where carrying an umbrella becomes almost as automatic as carrying a lipstick!

You can have your choice of water repellent Celanese rayon or taffeta covers, in solid colors or in multicolored plaids that cause the rain drops to dance instead of splash on your umbrella.

Call NAtional 4200, Extension 324, and we'll tell you where to find these.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

If a slim figure went with the rationing, you wouldn't mind it. But our rations allow for plenty of excess pounds and anything you do about your weight is still up to you.

Our Surgeon General Parran tells us that in the main we have been overfed and malnourished. Even the rich have been poorly fed. But as less food is available to the consumer, it is necessary to be a bit more canny about food selection. Otherwise, there is an increased chance of being overfed and malnourished.

Instead of stepping up the starches in your menus (which seems to be the tendency whenever there is any food curtailment), make use of the alternative sources of the essential materials affected by the restriction.

Spaghetti does not furnish protein and does not in any way take the place of meat, but it is a good meat extender. Add small meat balls and cheese to the spaghetti and you have almost a meal. Supplement it with a green salad—go light on the dressing or use vinegar and seasoning—and have a glass of skim milk or buttermilk, and fruit for dessert. That's not the meal for a bread pudding. In that menu, you get one-third of the day's essential materials and, if you don't eat too much spaghetti, you can reduce on it.

Some meatless meal you might try kidney beans topped with a large slice of yellow cheese and grilled on whole wheat bread that has already been toasted. With that serve stewed tomatoes, a green leafy vegetable or salad, and spiced apple sauce. And there you have another war rations meal that is balanced and slimming.

To safeguard against any vitamin A shortage that might arise from butter rationing, have a green leafy vegetable and a yellow vegetable every day. Then you won't miss out on the vitamin that builds your resistance to colds. It also helps you to keep your schoolgirl complexion and the lack of it may cause your fingernails to break easily. Green leafy vegetables are high in calcium. One cup of kale is almost one-half as high in calcium as a cup of milk. If milk should be rationed, that's something else to remember about them. It would be almost impossible for you to eat enough of the greens to gain weight, for the number of calories they contain is practically negligible.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

What are the "Requirements for Postwar Security?" The League for Industrial Democracy will thresh out the pros and cons of the subject in a three-day conference beginning Friday and continuing through Sunday at Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida Avenue Northwest.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Generally, the questions to be considered are:

What are the economic and social requirements for postwar security?

What are the implications of current policies for the fullfillment of these requirements?

What are the specific steps which progressives must take in order to be in a position to influence the character of the postwar world?

Friday's program at 8 o'clock deals with Economic Security Objectives. Donald H. Davenport, chief of the employment and occupational outlook branch, U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, and now in charge of postwar planning work for the Department of Labor, will discuss the "Problem of Demobilization." Evelyn M. Burns, chief of the economic and security and health section, National Resources Planning Board, will speak on "Social Security Objectives;" while J. Raymond Walsh, director of education and research, C. I. O., former member of the faculty of Harvard University, talks on "Outlines of Progressive Postwar Policy."

Purpose of the conference is education in behalf of increasing democracy in our economic, political and cultural life.

Lounge for Women

At least the servicewomen—WAACS, WAVES, SPARS and WHAMS—are coming in for a little home attention. In fact the U. S. O. Club at 1814 N Street, operated by the Women's Division of the National Catholic Community Service, is opening a special lounge for servicewomen. Special dedication ceremonies followed by a tea, Sunday afternoon, 4 to 6 o'clock, will inaugurate the first lounge to be set aside for the female soldiers and sailors.

To be specific, the WAACS, WAVES and SPARS will have the run of the U. S. O. Club. That means they can cook, stitch a seam in the sewing room, attend craft classes now in the offing as soon as the craftroom is redecorated. In the meantime, they will have a big lounge on the first floor for their very own—also, a powder room.

Representatives from all branches of the service (men and women) will be on hand for the opening of the servicewomen's rooms. Mrs. Frederick Altemus is chairman of the reception and advisory committee planning the event.

Bits of This and That . . .

James Selvage, recently appointed Director of Public Relations, Republican National Committee, was principal speaker at the Monday monthly meeting of the D. C. LEAGUE OF REPUBLICAN WOMEN. Preceding his talk, Miss Lena Hitchcock of the Speakers' Bureau, Red Cross, outlined the work of the organization and stressed the need for more members, volunteers and funds. Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, league president, presided and announced that Clare Boothe Luce and Winifred Stanley had become members of the club. Also, Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, and a number of wives of Representatives and Senators . . .

Bring-A-Member Tea

There will be a "Member-Bring-A-Member" tea of the B'nai B'rith Women of Argo Lodge today 2 to 4:30 p. m. at the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Samuel Galanty and Mrs. Charles Schulman will be joint hostesses for this affair. Guests of honor are Mrs. William Keighley (nee Genevieve Tobin) and Dolores of the Statler Hotel. Eileen Ritter will be present with her recording machine.

TIMELY PERSONALITIES

It's the top of the morning at the Army-Navy Red Cross Day Nursery and Billie, Mary Jo and Susan are looking the situation over very carefully before starting the day's 'work'

Fubby, whose real name is Linwood, tried his best not to look at the flash bulb when the photographer caught him and Billy hard at work in the building department of the Army-Navy Red Cross Day Nursery

It's a Booming Business At the Day Nursery

Army-Navy Red Cross Chapter Aids Working War Mothers With Child Care

By Elizabeth Henney

Dickie was howling at the top of his lungs when the photographer and reporter came into the Red Cross Army-Navy Day Nursery. The howls kept on at top speed for a few minutes, then subsided, with Dickie, into a corner of the room, where they developed into a minor wail that kept up for approximately 15 minutes.

Susan explained competently that someone had "hitted" Dickie over the head with an airplane, and added that was bad, 'cause the airplane was made of metal and might have cut Dickie. It seemed, however, that Dickie was accustomed to bringing on troubles and then howling about them, for everyone went on as if he and the wails hadn't been there at all.

Aside from that, business was progressing as usual and, with a blink or two when the photographer's flash bulb went off, everyone kept right on with his or her "work" of the moment, whether it happened to be crayoning or building an elaborate structure with blocks.

Located in Basement Of Constitution Hall

One of the blessings of the times to harassed and overworked service mothers, (wives of enlisted personnel of the Army and Navy), is this Day Nursery Center. Run on a volunteer basis, it is located in the basement of Constitution Hall. Right outside the door is a lovely lawn on which playthings, slides, playhouses and other playground paraphernalia have been set up.

Run with the utmost efficiency, this nursery is the special charge of Mrs. Charles B. B. Bubb, wife of Colonel Bubb of the Air Corps. Under her competent leadership are Vice Chairman Mrs. L. E. Bratton, wife of Rear Admiral Bratton; supervisor of the nursery, Mrs. E. B. Colladay, wife of Brigadier General Colladay, and equipment manager Mrs. R. E. Chavin, wife of Brigadier General Chavin.

Wives, Sisters, Daughters Of Officers Assist

Wives, sisters and daughters of officers give of their time and energy to this nursery, working long hours every day, for it is open from 7:45 a. m. to 6 p. m. every day and until one in the afternoon on Saturdays.

It is, by the way, a particularly interesting study in cooperation, for it embodies a number of units working together daily. In the first place the Daughters of the American Revolution donated the space. Then every morning a Red Cross Motor Corps vehicle picks up the children, and in the car every day are members of the Home Nursing group who check each child before he is picked up. If the tot seems to be not up to par, a home nurse takes his temperature, assists in getting him comfortable and cared for before going on without him, for they are careful not to mix the ailing and well youngsters.

Incidentally, the Home Service, which enters the little ones, in the nursery school, sees to it that each one has a health examination and certificate before being registered at the school. The Children's Hospital takes care of that for them.

Then, after arriving at the school, the children are checked again for health, given a big dose of cod liver oil daily and are ready for the day's program.

The program itself is scientifically worked out. Teachers work with the children, play with them, and give them a singing period. At 11:30 members of the Canteen Corps serve a hot luncheon to them and from 12:30 to 3:30 they all take naps.

Each Tot Has His Own Cot

Each tiny one has his own canvas cot, donated by a philanthropic gentleman in New York. Also each one has a pair of bedroom slippers, pajamas and a bathrobe. The latter are all made by the Production Corps of the Red Cross. And, by the by, a healthier and heartier looking group one couldn't wish for anywhere.

Part of that is due to the close watch kept on them daily by Mrs. H. I. Cole, the registered nurse who is constantly on duty. Teachers include Miss Kathleen Crocker, sister of an Army captain; Mrs. Laurance A. Pomeroy, jr., wife of a Navy lieutenant; Mrs. R. Van Dusen, whose husband is a lieutenant in the Navy, and Mrs. W. S. Rumbough, whose husband is a brigadier general in the Army. Another group that is of vast assistance to the nursery is the Jango organization. Members of that group come in every day after 4 in the afternoon and all day on Saturday.

Texas' Contribution to War Is Theme of Program at Annual Independence Day Luncheon; Thailand to Take Over Canteen Menu Tonight; British Plan Pancake Party

Texans on Capitol Hill were deep in the heart of homespun hospitality yesterday when two Lone Star Staters, Capt. Burris Jackson and Roy Miller, were joint hosts at their eleventh annual Texas Independence Day luncheon in the House Speaker's dining room.

Senator Connally

Members of the Texas Congressional delegation and a few other native sons who are big names in the Nation's Capital turned out for the event at which Captain Jackson was toastmaster, Senator Connally was principal speaker, and Texas' contribution to the war was the general theme of the program.

It's an open secret, of course, that Texas leads the country in the number of men in uniform, and it's a justly publicized fact that few Texans wait for a draft to blow them toward the fighting front. Much was made of both those points as the speeches got under way. Time was when most Texas Independence Day parties threw the spotlight squarely on the page of history that tells the story of how the Lone Star State revolted from Mexico in 1836 and became a republic. Yesterday's Jackson-Miller fete, however, quite fittingly emphasized Texas' role in the history now being written.

Among those present, in addition to Texas members of Congress, were Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, Assistant Secretary of Commerce Will Clayton, Col. Myron Blalock and Gen. Walter B. Pyron.

Speaker Rayburn

Quite a center of attention at the fete was House Speaker Sam Rayburn, who, incidentally, will be in line for some anniversary celebrating on his own tomorrow. March 4 will mark 30 years he has served on Capitol Hill. And tomorrow night, in tribute to Speaker Rayburn and his three decades in Washington, George Vournas will entertain at a buffet supper in his apartment at the Westchester. That's one party I wouldn't miss—for anything.

Uniformed Johnnies at the Stage Door Canteen tonight will have a rare treat. With attractive Mme. Seni Pramoj, wife of the Minister of Thailand, presiding at the cookstove, steaming and delicious dishes of curry and rice will be served up to soldiers and sailors all evening.

Tonight's will be the first in a series of Wednesday evening meals to be prepared by the distaff side of foreign embassies and legations. Before the year is out, visitors to the Stage Door Canteen will have made a culinary tour of the world.

When the national dish of Thailand goes on the table tonight, it will represent two full days' work. Mme. Pramoj spent hours yesterday trying to find that 100 pounds of beef which must go into the pot this morning. In addition to the beef there will be gallons of rice, the Thailand Legation's own imported curry powder, plenty of rare spices, herbs, coconut milk, peanuts, onions, potatoes and a few other assorted ingredients.

Early this morning, Mme. Pramoj and the other women of the Thai Legation will begin preparing the dish, and by the time the evening rush gets under way, it will be ready. Next week, another national dish will be featured on the Canteen menu . . . but I'll tell you more about that, later.

Mme. Seni Pramoj

Mention of food reminds me of another culinary treat coming up soon. For most Britishers, Lent begins properly only when they have an opportunity to eat English pancakes on Shrove Tuesday. With this in mind, women of the British War Relief Society are planning a pancake party next Tuesday from 9 until 11 o'clock at the America Newspaper Women's Club, 1604 Twentieth Street.

Lady Noble, wife of Admiral Sir Percy Noble, and Mrs. Herbert Seymour Howard, wife of Admiral Howard, will receive. Mrs. James E. Schwab, chairman of the shop committee, will assist. Mrs. Geoffrey Owen, Mrs. Horton Breaks and Mrs. James W. Boyer, jr., will be in the kitchen, and Mrs. Eric Seal will preside at the teatable. Waitresses will be all over the place, among them Lady Angela Dawney and Mrs. Eric Underwood. Proceeds will go to British War Relief, and a ritual—the origin of which lies in the long past—will be preserved.

Anne Semler Is Bride-Elect of Charles P. Curtis

Of interest in Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Anne Parker Semler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Ralph Semler of New Canaan, Conn., to Charles Pelham Curtis 3d, son of Mrs. Edith Roelker Curtis, of Cressbrook Farm, Norfolk, Mass., and Charles Pelham Curtis, jr., long an overseer of Harvard University. He is the nephew of Countess Palffy, who is living in Boston this winter.

Miss Semler is a graduate of St. Timothy's School, Catonsville, Md., and studied music at the Mannes Music School of New York. Mr. Curtis prepared at Groton and Phillips Andover for Harvard University where he was a member of the Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770, Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and the Porcellian Club. He is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pelham Curtis of Boston.

Purely Personal

The Canadian Minister and Mrs. McCarthy have issued invitations to a pre-view showing of a March of Time film on Canada which will take place at the Legation on Friday afternoon. There will be three showings of the picture, at 5:45, 6:30, and 7 o'clock respectively.

Mrs. Francis Biddle will be hostess at luncheon on Friday in honor of her sister, Miss Cornelia Van A. Chapin, noted sculptress, of New York.

The Swedish Military Attache and Mme. Karl Wessel have returned from New York, where they spent the past week at the St. Regis Hotel.

The Spanish Agricultural Attache and Senora de Echegaray will entertain at a cocktail party on Saturday from 6 to 8 o'clock.

Miss Dorothea Drayton and Miss Jeanne Pierrot of Washington who are students this year at Dana Hall in Wellesley, Mass., were members of a ski-group from Dana Hall, which recently spent a holiday at Eastern Slope Inn in North Conway, Mass.

Dr. and Mrs. Hendrick N. Boon of this city are in New York for a brief stay.

Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell has returned to her apartment here after spending a few days at the Red Fox Tavern in Middleburg. She expects to re-open her home, Sunny Side, near Upperville, Va., early in the spring.

Mrs. A. C. B. Symon will entertain at a 3 to 5 o'clock tea this afternoon in her apartment at the Dorchester House. This is a party-with-a-purpose for which guests will bring the pennies they have saved during the month to contribute to Navy relief organizations They will also bring their spare magazines to be sent out to the troops in India by Mrs. Symon, whose husband is Secretary of the Indian Supply Mission here.

Tea Launches Drive for Blood Donors

Inspired by the action of the wives of Army and Navy Air Force personnel under the leadership of Mrs. H. H. Arnold, the Army and Navy Auxiliary has launched an extensive campaign to recruit donors for the District Red Cross Blood Donor Center.

Thousands of cards have been sent out to wives of servicemen, and the response so far has been overwhelming. The Army and Navy Auxiliary, who are conducting the campaign, entertained at a tea yesterday at 4:30 at the Sulgrave Club.

Among the special guests at this party-with-a-purpose were Mrs. George C. Marshall, Mrs. Ernest J. King, Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Mrs. Russell Waesche, Mrs. Charles Bubb, Mrs. Webb Hayes, Mrs. Leslie Bratton and Mrs. William S. Masten.

Janet Maher Is Bride of Joseph Beech

Miss Janet Dolorita Maher, granddaughter of former United States Senator and Mrs. James A. O'Gorman of New York, was married Monday afternoon in the rectory of the Roman Catholic Church of St. Ignatius Loyola in New York to Joseph Beech, jr. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Beech of Chicago.

Wearing traditional ivory satin, the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Maher of New York, was given in marriage by her father. She carried an ivory-bound prayerbook and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant was Mrs. Samuel B. Moore, jr. A reception followed the ceremony at the Junior League Clubhouse.

The bride attended the Blessed Sacrament Convent and was graduated from Spence School and Vassar College. The bridegroom attended the Canadian School in Chengtu, China.

Virginia Smith Is Bride-Elect Of Lieut. Benedict

Col. Oliver P. Smith, executive officer of the plans and policies section, headquarters, United States Marine Corps, and Mrs. Smith announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia King Smith, to Lieut. Charles C. Benedict.

The bride-elect, who was graduated this month from the University of California, is a member of Delta Gamma sorority. Lieutenant Benedict, the son of Mrs. Charles C. Benedict and the late Major Benedict, was graduated from West Point on January 19 and is now on duty at Hobbs, N. Mex.

Lieutenant Benedict is a nephew of Maj. Gen. Jay L. Benedict, United States Army. His grandfather, the late Edward C. Potter, was widely known in Washington musical circles.

The wedding will take place in April.

Mrs. Wm. Cushing Arrives in Virginia To Spend Season

Mrs. William Cushing of Boston has arrived in Middleburg, Va., and is staying with Mrs. S. Preston Luck for a few days. She is having the house on the small farm she recently purchased modernized a bit before she moves in.

Mrs. Cushing bought the place from the late Tom Harrington. The former Miss Mollie Dodge, Mrs. Cushing is the daughter of Col. Harrison Dodge, who was formerly in charge of the Mount Vernon estate. Her husband, who is an instructor at Groton, plans to join Mrs. Cushing in Virginia later in the season.

MRS. DEMAREST LLOYD

Nancy Tenney Is Wed to Ensign Lloyd

The Chapel of the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla., was the scene yesterday afternoon of the wedding of Miss Nancy Campbell Tenney, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Rockwell Campbell Tenney, and Ensign Demarest Lloyd, U. S. N. R. Ensign Lloyd is the son of Mrs. Demarest Lloyd and the late Mr. Lloyd.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white marquisette over satin with heirloom rosepoint lace outlining the square neck and sleeves with an inset of rosepoint in the dirndl skirt which lengthened into a train. Her veil of illusion fell to the end of her train from a Juliet cap outlined with lace. She carried white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Charles Henry Tenney 2d was matron of honor and Mrs. Peter MacDonald and Mrs. John Alexander Orb 3d were bridesmaids. They wore pale green taffeta gowns and carried bouquets of spring flowers.

Out of town guests for the wedding were Mrs. Rockwell Campbell Tenney, Mrs. Charles Henry Tenney, Charles Henry Tenney 2d, Aviation Cadet A. Gilbert Tenney, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd and Miss Karen Lloyd.

Governor Stassen to Address United Nations Discussion Group

Minnesotans in the Capitol are planning to turn out in full force next Monday night when that State's Gov. Harold E. Stassen speaks at Constitution Hall, the third in the series called United Nations Today and Tomorrow Discussions, sponsored by a committee of representative men and women of Washington. He will speak on "The United Nations as a Pattern for Peace."

Senator Joseph E. Ball of Minnesota, long-time friend of the Governor, will introduce him to the audience. Representative Walter H. Judd of Minnesota will serve on the panel. Representative Richard Pillsbury Gale and Mrs. Gale will occupy a box and will have with them Mrs. Ball and John Cowles, editor of the Minneapolis Star-Journal and the Des Moines Register.

Many of those here in war work who call Minneapolis and St. Paul their home and who will be in the audience next Monday night are sons, daughters, grandsons and granddaughters of the Old Guard Republicans, the founding fathers of the State, those milling, mining, agricultural barons who first scoffed at the new political era personified by Gov. Stassen and his legion of followers.

Among those who will attend are Mr. and Mrs. Sewall Andrews, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Salon Buck, Mr. William Barron, Col. Francis D. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Carr, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Courtney, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Dienard, Mr. and Mrs. John Finn, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Stanton Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gammons, Col. and Mrs. John J. O'Brien, Mr. Frank Haas, Mr. Roy Hendrickson, Gen. and Mrs. Philip B. Fleming, Col. and Mrs. Carl H. March, Mr. and Mrs. David Winton, Mr. and Mrs. John Winton and many more.

George V. Denny, famed president of New York's Town Hall, who was prevented from being present at the second lecture in this series, will be on hand next Monday night to act as moderator for the program.

Three Engagements of Interest Among Those Announced Today

Among the engagements made known today in Washington are those of Miss Helen Wilson Lippitt to Ensign Millard Humstone, Miss E. Mozell Moore to R. Windsor Yates and Miss Veronica Gertrude Gillin to Ralph A. Howard.

Miss Lippitt's betrothal is announced by her mother, Mrs. Thomas Perry Lippitt. She is a graduate of Potomac School and Miss Madeira's. Ensign Humstone, son of Mrs. Millard Cumming Humstone and the late Mr. Humstone of Greenwich, Conn., is a graduate of Harvard University, class class of 1936. No date has been set for the wedding.

Moore—Yates

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Moore of Halifax, Va., announce their daughter's engagement. Miss Moore will graduate in June from Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Va. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Yates of Arlington.

Gillin—Howard

Miss Gillin's engagement is made known by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Gillin of New York and Washington. Mr. Howard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Howard of Harlan, Ky.

Miss Pearson Becomes Bride

The marriage of Miss Bernice E. Pearson of McComb, Miss., and Harold B. Stanton of Bladensburg, Md., took place yesterday at the W. O. W. Hall. Capt. S. W. Salisbury, United States Navy, C. C., officiated at the 8:30 ceremony.

Dinner Honors Newsmen Here From Uruguay

The Ambassador of Uruguay and Senora de Blanco were ranking guests at the dinner given last night by Mrs. Edward Beale McLean at Friendship in honor of the Uruguayan newspaper representatives who are currently on a tour of war centers in this country.

Those honored were Dr. Tomas C. Brena, Senor Jose Pereyra Gonzales, Dr. Eduardo Rodriguez Larretta, Senor Julio Caproale Seelta, Senor Ricardo Vernazza, Senor Carlos Manini Rios and Senor Nelson Garcio Serrato.

Among the guests were the Finnish Minister and Mme. Procope, Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally, Senator and Mrs. Burnet R. Maybank, Senator and Mrs. Harry S. Truman, Senator Alben Barkley, Mrs. Claude D. Pepper, Senator Robert A. Taft, Senator Joseph F. Guffey and Miss Pauletta Guffey and Senator Theodore F. Green.

Also in attendance were Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Maj. Gen. Russell L. Maxwell, recently returned from the Middle East command, and Mrs. Maxwell; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann and Mrs. Alfred duPont. Following dinner there was a showing of the film "Immortal Sergeant."

Lynne Gelfer Betrothed to Army Doctor

Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Gelfer of Brooklyn, N. Y., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lynne M. Gelfer, to Lieut. Julius Kauffman, United States Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kauffman, of this city.

Miss Gelfer attended Cedar Crest College, the University of Virginia and is a graduate of the George Washington University.

Lieutenant Kauffman was graduated from the George Washington University and the George Washington School of Medicine where he was elected to the Smith Reed Russell Obstetrical Society and Phi Delta Epsilon. He is on foreign service with the Medical Corps.

O'Donnells 'At Home' After Honeymoon

After a short wedding trip to New York, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. O'Donnell, whose wedding took place in St. Gabriel's Church on February 20, are now making their home at 4019 Kansas Avenue.

The bride is the former Miss Winifred Heath, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Heath of New Orleans. Her husband is the son of Mrs. Mae O'Donnell of Franklin, Pa. The Rev. William J. Sweeney officiated at the 10 o'clock ceremony. Lieut. and Mrs. Edward M. Heath, jr., brother and sister-in-law of the bride, were the only attendants.

Following the informal ceremony, a reception was held in the Blue Room of the Hamilton Hotel. The bride attended Newcomb College in New Orleans and the bridegroom attended Purdue University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is at present with the War Department in the office of the Chief of Engineers.

"I'm going to shock you!"

"Because I'm going to hit right from the shoulder, starting now.

"Out there, our boys are fighting, and they're falling. Not one or two at a time, picked off by a nice clean bullet. But fifty at a time in the roaring, flaming hell of a shell burst.

"Out there, they aren't walking around in clean white uniforms on neat decks. They're running and slipping around on the bloody heaving flanks of a carrier foundering in a sea of oil with her guts torn out.

"They're not lying in cool, immaculate hospital beds with pretty nurses to hold their hands. They're flat on their backs on cold steel taking a smoke and waiting for a doctor to get through with the seriously wounded.

"Out there, they're fighting and they're falling but they're winning! And get this straight—they're not complaining. But I want you to know what they're up against. I want you to know they look to you to give them in your way the same full measure of help and devotion they get unasked from their own shipmates.

"And you can help them—by giving generously to the Red Cross.

"If you had seen the faces of men pulled naked from the sea as they received kit bags and cigarettes handed out on the spot by Red Cross Field Directors—you'd know what I mean!"

On every front the Red Cross presses forward. Each day, the need increases for your support.

Your Chapter is raising its Second War Fund in March. Give more this year—give double if you can.

THE RECORD SINCE PEARL HARBOR

For the Armed Forces—More than one million and a half service men have received, through the Field Staff, practical help in personal problems. The Red Cross is with them in training and at the front. For morale and recreation, over one hundred Red Cross Clubs have been established for overseas troops. There are more than five thousand workers in the field.

Civilian Relief—About sixty million dollars in war relief has been administered in every allied country. Food, clothing, medicinal supplies have gone to Great Britain, Russia, China, Africa for Polish and Greek refugees, and many others.

Thousands of packages to prisoners of war have been safely delivered through cooperation with the International Red Cross in Switzerland.

The Home Front—Training our people to meet the needs of war. Millions of First Aid Courses. Hundreds of thousands trained in Home Nursing and Nutrition Courses. Thousands enlisted as Nurses' Aides and in Motor and Canteen and Staff Assistant Corps.

More than one million and a half blood donations through Red Cross collection centers and the distribution of the life saving Plasma wherever needed.

The Red Cross record in this war is one that we Americans may well be proud of—and support.

'The People' Choose Own Ten Best Films for '42

Dr. Gallup Reports Results of His Survey; 'Yankee Doodle' Almost Cracked a Record; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

LIKE THE WASHINGTON POST, the Hollywood executives and producers are availing themselves of the penetrating analyses of public opinion and taste made accessible to them by Dr. George Gallup and his cross-section surveys of national thought.

JAMES CAGNEY

The branch of the Gallup enterprises particularly devoted to the needs of the motion-picture industry is the Audience Research Institute, Inc., which, like the Gallup Poll, has its headquarters in Princeton, N. J., and territorial offices in New York and Hollywood. The greater part of the results of its research is confidential, but occasionally there emerges something of widespread interest that is released for public consumption. Such is the case with its recent "people's choice" of the 10 best pictures of 1942.

With the annual banquet of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences only a-day away, it is interesting to note what Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public feel ought to be the Academy Awards celebrated on that occasion.

This is the order in which "the people" would allot the prizes to the first six of their 10 selections, were they in control of the Academy balloting:

1. MRS. MINIVER
2. WAKE ISLAND
3. HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY
4. HOLIDAY INN
5. ROAD TO MOROCCO
6. PRIDE OF THE YANKEES

"How Green Was My Valley," of course, won last year's Academy Award, but was released so late in 1941 that to many parts of the country it was sufficiently new to garner the third-place vote almost a year after its official release.

It is comforting to this department to contemplate the choice of "the people" in the matter of last year's "10 Best." It coincides more completely with our own nominations than the vote of the critics, editors, commentators, etceteras, recorded in the last annual poll conducted by Mr. Jack Alicoate's Film Daily—the accepted professional yardstick of the industry. After all, we are endeavoring to be a reliable guide to the picturegoing public and not a mouthpiece for the producers and directors, although for them we entertain respect and high regard. That "the people" and this desk seem to see practically eye to eye is the most heartening thing that has happened to us since we picked up that penny on the sidewalk.

Almost, But Not Quite

If an additional 100 people had been able to sardine their way into the theater during the first week's run of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," starring James Cagney, with Walter Huston, Jeanne Cagney, Joan Leslie and a huge number of others in important roles, another record would have been splintered at the Earle. No doubt this would have happened—or so the management likes to believe—had not that first week included a talk by the President that everybody wanted to hear and a blackout drill, over which no one greatly enthused. At any rate, Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour, were beginning to tremble a bit when "Road to Morocco's" all-time attendance record began to show signs of wobbling. It is highly probably that they will have still another scare in store for them, when "Air Force" gets going on Thirteenth Street, come Friday.

Was that, or was it not, Nancy Carroll who reached her third-row, center seat just in time for the rise of the curtain on the "Priorities of 1942," at the National Monday night? That's what I thought. The former Miss Anne La Hiff, kin of the late Billy, famous New York restaurateur, and high on the list of top money-making film stars in 1929, should have found much to divert her nostalgically in "Priorities." Her early stage training was gained in the Winter Garden "Passing Shows," in which Willie Howard was a perennial star, and on the West Coast she was a screen contemporary of Gloria Swanson, who was making her debut in the Fischer fol-de-rol Monday night. As vivacious and lovely as ever, Miss Carroll should be out there before those cameras right this minute!

Anyone owning an old recording of "As Time Goes By," the ballad revived so effectively in "Casablanca," the Humphrey Bogart-Ingrid Bergman-Paul Henreid costarrer now at the Metropolitan after two capacity weeks at the Earle, has in his possession what amounts to an "objet d'art" of some value. Not one is to be had in Washington. Sheet music, yes; but no record. As was the case with "Intermezzo," after the release of the picture of that name, "As Time Goes By" has taken a terrific spurt in popularity since incorporated into the action of "Casablanca."

Amongst the Moppets

Little, 5-year-old Margaret O'Brien, who scored so tremendously with Robert Young and Laraine Day in "Journey for Margaret" and then came right back to multiply the poignance of her baby appeal with Jimmy Cagney and Ann Sothern in the most forceful of the "United Nations Week" releases, will be a Russian youngster in her next for M-G-M, which, oddly enough, will be called "Russia." And Master Jack Jenkins, who is reported to steal scene after scene in Bridegroom Bill Saroyan's "The Human Comedy," has gone and got himself down with the chickenpox. Never a dull moment in the life of a movie star!

And-Not-a-Sound-Was-Heard Note

How do you mean, the all-clear will be announced over the radio? Must have been in invisible ink yesterday afternoon.

In All Her History-Book Finery!

LUCILLE BALL

in one of the costumes her studio describes as "breathtaking in loveliness," which she will wear as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Technicolor siren in the forthcoming picturization of the sensational stage hit, "DuBarry Was a Lady." Although the truthfulness of the title may be impugned, there can be no gainsaying the all-out prodigality with which M.-G.-M. has approached the making of this first starring vehicle for Miss Ball under their banner

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Not Ill, But Wasting!

Hollywood, March 2 (INS).—The rotund Laird Cregar is in the hospital and has been for three days. Laird isn't sick. He is just trying to reduce that 300 pounds to something less than a ton, and so far he has taken off 20. He hopes to lose 60—that is, unless he is summoned to Twentieth Century-Fox to star in "The Lodger." Yes, William Goetz has bought Mrs. Belloc-Lowndes' grisly murder horror. It is one of the most widely read books, both in London and America, and tells the story of Jack the Ripper, which character, of course, Laird will play.

PAUL LUKAS

Barry Lynden, author of "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," has been called in by Robert Bassler, the producer, to adapt the thriller.

Might not have heard that Laura La Plante had signed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer if I weren't so pally with her two cute youngsters. Every time I see the Asher juniors, who live across the street, they hail me with gusto. The other day I asked, "How's your mother?" "She's fine," said the little girl with the dark pigtails, "she's signing a contract." Well, I always say, "Out of the mouths of babes."

A little snooping revealed that Laura is coming back to the screen with the same company with whom her husband, Capt. Irving Asher, is associated. He made M-G-M movies here and in London before he entered the Signal Corps. Laura, one of the most popular stars of silent days, today is just as beautiful as she was when she was Universal's leading comedienne.

I thought I had heard everything when David Selznick was toying with the idea of producing "Mein Kampf," Heil Hitler's book. But, listen to this one: Richard Oswald, an independent producer, has the finances and is ready to film "The Story of Schickelgruber," the life story of Adolf, starting from the time he earned his living as a paper-hanger to the present moment. Paul Lukas, no less, according to Mr. Oswald, plays the most hated man in the world and I can promise him now plenty of hisses in the theater. Oswald produced 57 German films before he was thrown out by Mr. Schickelgruber's Nazi Gestapo.

Chatter in Hollywood: At the age of 74, Henry Sanders, George's dad, is turning movie actor, and George, who never registers delight at anything, is getting a real kick out of it.

Sanders, sr., who was a rope manufacturer in Russia and who also is credited with introducing the Balalaika as a modern musical instrument, makes his debut in "appointment in Berlin." What is especially interesting is George's pa, who has never acted in his life, is enacting his real-life role (George's father) in the Columbia movie.

HEDDA HOPPER

Hearts Still Are 'Young and Gay'

Hollywood, March 2.—Lunched with Cornelia Otis Skinner and Emily Kimbrough, who talk exactly as they wrote in "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay"—only now it's about movies. They signed to write for Paramount in New York, so had to use all their charm and persuasion to get by the gateman at the studio here. They were given an office, but are still doing their own typewriting—an unheard-of thing. . . . Emily's learned that when Cornelia goes to the window, supposedly in deep concentration, she's really looking down on the antics of Bob Hope stunting on a bicycle. Says Cornelia, If I can ever get the window open, I'm going to throw a red rose down on his head, hoping he'll look up so I can get to meet him—and boast to my son. . . ." They got on the Bataan miniature set by mistake. There was Emily, standing above toy palm trees, when workmen started waving at her, she thought. "How friendly!" waved back. Then a policeman came along and quietly removed her from the set. Seems her head had become part of the scenery.

BETTE DAVIS

It's Luck with Her

Bette Davis hopes to leave today for her vacation in New Engand, and O, boy! does she need one! After a rest she'll tour Eastern camps in May. She aims to sing "If You Can Call It That!" says Bette. . . . Like father like son. Fibber McGee and Molly's son, who's in college and entitled to deferment of from three to six months, couldn't wait. He'll join the Air Force. Fibber served in the last war. . . . Our Matty Fox, formerly of Universal, now of the War Department, will soon trip to the altar with Peggy Tippett, one of New York's most luscious models. . . . There'll be trouble if Irving Rapper, who has his heart set on producing the Gershwin picture, is switched to something else. . . . Helen Craig, star of the play, "Johnny Belinda," is wanted for "Frenchman's Creek."

Sight of the Week

Red Skelton sitting between his wife Edna and girl friend, Muriel Ross. At his airshow he addresses all his conversation to Edna. Then they gather up writers, go out for supper. He goes off with Muriel, leaving Edna sitting. He wants desperately to do his airshow from the camps, just as Hope, Benny, and Kyser do, but neither the studio nor his sponsor are willing. Wonder why? . . . Judy Garland and Van Johnson applauding Renee de Marco and her three partners at their Ciro's opening. Ditto at same place, Anne Baxter and Richard Derr. . . . Phil Silvers borrowed for Jean Arthur's "Lady Takes a Chance." He's been taking dramatic lessons from Orson Welles.

Experienced Now

Bonita Granville, while back East, almost had a baby. Riding along in a taxi, she saw a woman with a baby waiting for a bus, so told the driver to stop, gave them a lift. At the next stop light, woman plumped the baby into Bonita's lap, jumped out and disappeared. Bonita took the infant to the theater and kept it till police called for it. . . . "Right Guy" will be the first picture to show actual scenes of war workers' lunch time entertainments. It's about shipworkers. Yesterday David Chatkin and Director Ray Enright visited the yards to take some scenes, arrived in time to see "Lunch Time Follies," which workers themselves put on twice a week. Act was so good it will be put in the picture.

'Tis Ever Thus

When Helmut Dantine got his first acting chance here, they wouldn't take his wife, so she went on to New York and got her chance in "Janie," and made good. Now she's been offered the pick of our pictures at four times the salary they could have signed her for, but she'll remain on Broadway. . . . It's Sergt. Ray Middleton now. Why don't they get him for "This Is the Army?" He's stationed here. . . . The Franchot Tones are again denying stork rumors, but you can look for a big announcement concerning Teresa Wright. . . . Charles (Amos) Gosden is in such a run-down state (and I should think he would be, after 16 straight years of Amos and Andy), that his doctors have ordered him to take six months' complete relaxation.

Short Shorts

Liz Whitney, who's been auctioning off her horses, was incensed when a friend wrote and said, "I'm surprised at you—getting rid of your horses. I expected you'd save one of their steaks for me." . . . Dave Shelley, Buddy De Sylva's stepson, seriously injured in an auto accident as he was leaving Bing Crosby's home the other night. Another car came around the corner fast, hit him as he was getting into his car. . . . Eddie Judson around town looking for another beauty to promote. . . . Fan Laura Valadon writes that Sophie Tucker will leave for Hollywood soon to play the story of her life for Warners. Well, Warners have been keeping mighty quiet about it.

C'est La Guerre

they'd have us believe, has had to learn to "roll her own," what with the wartime shortage of girdles, garters and such. Could have something to do with her next picture's being called "True to Life!"

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Mar. 2.

Joan Crawford surprised her new husband by hiring for their household a noted Belgian cook. The dishes he prepared for them were incomparable . . . One recent evening Mike Levee, the movie agent, was a dinner guest there. "I love to cook," he told Miss Crawford, then entered the kitchen and gave instructions to the cook about the proper way to prepare the steaks . . . The following Thursday—the day off for all Hollywood servants—the Belgian cook appeared at Mike Levee's agency office. "I came here," was his vengeful explanation, "to help you out with your clients."

JOAN CRAWFORD

Jed Harris, the producer-director of the current hit, "Dark Eyes," met Harry Carey, the veteran movie star who now is visiting New York. Harris admired Carey's powerful grip, clear eyes and lean figure . . . "And how do you feel, Jed?" Carey asked . . . "I feel I'm getting older," Harris sighed. "I know that's so because I've reached the stage where I'd rather see an old enemy than a new friend."

George Bernard Shaw still is among the top-ranking choices of People We'd Like to Meet, listed by the new visitors to England. Shaw—who once refused to meet a bore, explaining: "The trouble with him is that he lacks the power of conversation, but not the power of speech"—has been obliging these visitors, but the illness of his wife now prevents him from doing so. When a Brazilian delegation recently asked to see him, Shaw sent a postcard: "The Bernard Shaw you want to see no longer exists. There is nothing of him except an old specter, with his 87 years, in an inaccessible village where he has no means of entertaining such distinguished visitors and where, also, his old companion lies seriously ill. He regrets this deeply because he foresees a great future for South America."

Ruth Bryan Owen told Mary Margaret McBride about the day when she was four-and-a-half years old and her father, William Jennings Bryan, took her to the House of Representatives and sat her on his knee. The chair next to them at that time was occupied by Representative Tucker of Virginia . . . Years later when Mrs. Owen was elected to Congress she occupied the same seat. And in the chair next to her she found that same Representative Tucker . . . He greeted her and then confessed: "On that day you were here and sat on your father's lap some one on the floor of the House was making a fantastic suggestion that women should be allowed to vote.

Quentin Reynolds and his wife last week completed furnishing their large, elegant appartment at River House. And this week Reynolds leaves for Russia. "The only way I can afford to maintain this home here," the foreign correspondent sighed, "is by going away from it" . . . Julius Hochman of the ILGWU will issue a call to the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., to form a Labor Public Relations Bureau, to combat the new surge of attacks against American labor . . . George Jessel, who can't memorize a script, sat with Ed Jerome who, on 10 hours' notice, took over the role of George Washington in "The Patriots." Jerome said: "You too could've done it, George." "Yes," the confusable Jessel agreed, "but if I were playing Washington, in my speech he'd be going to Lindy's instead of to Valley Forge."

During Albert Einstein's stay in London, he was a guest at the Rothschilds, where he met some of the Sassoon family. The guests grouped themselves around the great scientist and bluntly asked him to explain to them his theory of relativity . . . Einstein patiently began, in professional terms. But then he sensed the dull response of his nonmathematical listeners. Einstein turned to the table, where he had placed his violin for such an emergency, and said: "Relatively speaking, I'm sure you would rather hear me play" . . . He played.

Labor leaders in Harlem are trying to fight absenteeism with signs reading: "You Can't Lick Japs—By Shooting Craps" . . . Thomas Sancton, who wrote "Newsmen's Holiday," has become the new managing editor of the New Republic . . . PM is revising its instructions to new reporters, advising them that a newsworthy item is one in which Man Bites Underdog . . . Maj. Anatol Litvak saw the new comedy, "Doughgirls," and then debated its merits with Publisher Bennett Cerf. Litvak deplored the play's satirizing Washington's warworkers. "Let me put it to you this way," said Major Litvak. "If you knew you could make money by publishing this play, would you do it? Would you exploit the war that way?" Cerf fumbled in his pocket for the answer, and then exhibited it—the publication contract.

Extended Runs and a New Bill Or Two Mark Theater Week

"PRIORITIES OF 1942." No ration book is needed to get your quota of laughs from the antics of Lou Holtz and Willie Howard, now engaged in resuscitating vaudeville during a two-week stay at the National Theater. The addition of Gloria Swanson to the cast provides additional variety to the already diversified doings which include the Helen Reynolds Skaters, Luba Malina, Lari and Conchita, and others.

Earle

"AIR FORCE." The fabulous "Mary Ann," a Flying Fortress, takes off to clear the skies of enemy planes and write a notable page in cinema history. The undisputed star of the film is assisted by John Garfield, Gig Young, Harry Carey and George Tobias. Aerial action without letup is assured by the name of Howard Hawks in the credit list as coproducer. Paul Remos and his Toy Boys are featured in the new stage show. Held over.

Capitol

"POWERS GIRL." The life and times of those ravishing creatures who grace the covers of magazines and billboards from coast to coast is discreetly unveiled in a story concerning the graduates of a glamour school run under the tutelage of the best known modeling agency. George Murphy, Anne Shirley and Alan Mowbray are featured, with music by Benny Goodman and His Orchestra. The Pied Pipers and Harrison and Fisher are the stage attractions. Opens Thursday.

RKO-Keith's

"THEY GOT ME COVERED." Time marches on, and so do Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour in still another week of their hilarious adventures in wartime Washington. Bob is seen as the reporter who muffed the German invasion of Russia but redeems himself with the round-up of a nest of spies here in the Nation's Capital. Held over.

Metropolitan

"CASABLANCA." Humphrey Bogart takes a sock at the Axis leaders in this fast-moving film whose theme is devoted to refugees from war-torn Europe and their attempts to secure exit visas to the Americas. Ingrid Bergman and Paul Henreid share top-billing with Bogart, assisted by Claude Rains, Conrad Veidt, Sydney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre. Held over.

Columbia

"IN WHICH WE SERVE." Noel Coward's tribute to the British navy is a panorama of the men and ships who serve the far-flung empire. Flash-back sequences are used to describe the lives and ideals of the crew of a destroyer which has heroically gone down in battle. Opens Thursday.

Little

Pix

Trans-Lux

"PRELUDE TO VICTORY." A new March of Time devoted to the positive plan of the big United Nations offensive yet to come. On the same bill is a short subject entitled "Public Sport No. 1," with demonstrations by Honus Wagner, Harry Danning and Mort Cooper. The cartoon of the week is "Something About a Soldier." Opens Friday.

Gayety

Silent Partner

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Advisers Suggest Cure for Absenteeism

UNDERSECRETARY of War Patterson's labor advisers have a one-point program for ending absenteeism in war plants. Here is the one point:

Communities should adjust themselves to the hours of the factories. Stores, banks, doctors, lawyers, plus other services, should be available not merely for one shift of workers but for all shifts.

At present, workers on the swing shift, beginning at midnight, find themselves out of gear with the life of the community. The greatest absenteeism is among workers on the odd shifts, and can be attributed not to indifference to winning the war but to the inconvenience of trying to live and buy food and get Johnny to the doctor, while the swing shift turn night into day.

Absenteeism is higher among women than men, which may mean nothing more than trouble with the ration board. A woman will take a day off from the factory because she has to register for canned foods, or because a child is sick in the family, or because she hasn't had time to buy a new dress at the store.

Remedy for this is nothing less than two or three shifts on the part of the services that serve the workers. The ration board, it is suggested, should come to the factory.

In many cases, War Department advisers say, absenteeism is caused not by lotfing but by overwork. In certain machine-tool areas, such as New England, men have been working 50 and 56 hours a week for years. They are simply exhausted.

Incidentally, this factor is the principal cause of absenteeism in Germany, where workers are worn down by unremitting labor and long hours.

NOTE: There is little sympathy in Undersecretary Patterson's office for the Rickenbacker crusade against labor. It is regarded as useless and unsound to try to appeal to workers over their leaders.

Capital Chaff

SENATOR NYE of North Dakota, long-time critic of Harry Hopkins, met Mrs. Hopkins at the hospital where she is a nurse's aide and where Mrs. Nye was convalescing. Quipped Nye, tugging at the collar of Mrs. Hopkins' uniform, "I don't see any lend-lease emeralds."

It is Herbert Hoover's opinion that United States troops will come back from this war more rugged individualists than ever and we will go back to our old era of rugged individualism. He bases this on the fact that soldiers today are getting intensive specialist training. . . . Senator Styles Bridges, the man who spiked the diplomatic career of Ed Flynn, will also attempt to spike the judicial appointment of Assistant Attorney General Francis Shea, if he is appointed United States district judge in New Hampshire. Shea was born in New Hampshire, but lived most of his life in Buffalo, N. Y., where he was dean of the University of Buffalo Law School. Bridges wants a long-time New Hampshire resident as judge.

Navy Bottleneck

The Navy's vital Bureau of Ships, sometimes a target of congressional criticism because of naval construction and design, has been revamped and reenergized under alert Admirals Ed Cochrane and Earle Mills.

In addition to these A1 men at the top, the bureau also has some excellent younger men, many of them reserve officers, brought in from outside walks of life.

But the bottleneck between the top and the bottom is very narrow and the movement through it is slow. Executive who guards it is Capt. A. R. Marron, old line Annapolis graduate who believes that every "t" must be crossed and every "i" dotted. Orders moving over his desk, flow at snail-like pace.

In the Navy, secret orders cannot be phoned or telegraphed. Instructions to shipyards all over the U. S. A. contain vital military secrets, and they must go by mail. Thousands of letters regarding ship design, changes in design, materials for ships, specifications, must clear from the Bureau of Ships daily, and some of the most important go over Captain Marron's desk.

However, he believes that every letter should be written in standard Annapolis tradition. If it isn't, kindly, patient Captain Marron turns the letter back to the younger officers to be rewritten. Sometimes this takes days of rewriting. One letter was held up for eight months.

As a result, impatient younger officers have devised a neat formua. They wait unti after 4:30 p. m. to sign mail. At 4:30 Marron goes off duty and they can assume responsibility. So they sign the letters themselves, rush out vitally needed instructions that night.

No Russian Hurrahs

American observers in Russia report that the public is not throwing its red cap in the air over current military successes. The reaction is not much different, in fact, from the reaction to losses.

"The mood of the Russian people," says one report, "has not changed much since last summer when they were being driven back to the Volga. Nor has it changed much from the years of peace."

It is explained that Russians have become accustomed to tumult and personal danger. For 25 years they have lived in an atmosphere of revolution, purges, and starvation. War has brought no sudden shock to them as to us.

Even in the face of the terrific losses Russia has suffered in this war, the losses forced upon Rusia by her own government 10 years ago remain almost unsurpassed. When the Soviet government was imposing on the people the unwelcome system of collective farming, farmers were denied seed for planting, and a vast number of people, estimated between two and five million, starved to death.

The Russians are stolid, taking defeat or victory in their stride.

Liberia's New Band

When President Roosevelt visited President Edwin Barclay of Liberia recently, the latter, anxious that the Negro republic be prepared, asked for U. S. arms to equip the Liberian frontier force of 800 to 900 men.

Roosevelt promised to see what he could do. When he returned he found that it would not be possibe to spare the arms and ammunition requested. For one thing, shipping space is too important and it was deemed more advisabe to save it for urgenty needed cargoes to North Africa.

Instead, the Liberian military band will receive as a gift from the United States a new set of musical instruments. There will be 28 instruments, including a bass drum and a variety of brass horns.

Browne Rites Tomorrow At Arlington

Funeral services for Sergt. Maj. Charles H. Browne, retired, 68, whose 35 years' service in the Marine Corps included the Spanish-American War, the Philippine insurrection, the Boxer rebellion and the first World War, will be conducted tomorrow at Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia Avenue Northwest. The hour has not been set.

Military and Masonic rites at the grave will precede burial in Arlington Cemetery. Sergeant Major Browne, who died Sunday at the Naval Hospital, Bethesda, had retired from active service 10 years ago. Since then, however, he had been in charge of adjutant and inspectors' personnel at Marine headquarters here.

Surviving are his wife, Ella Nora Browne; two daughters, Iona Catherine Browne of Washington and Millicent Mershon of Mayhill, N. Mex., and a sister, Mrs. Matilda Clarke of Washington.

Mrs. AnnieCarver's Funeral Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Annie Talbert Carver, 78, native of Washington, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Lee funeral home, Fourth Street and Masachusetts Avenue Northeast. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Carver, who lived at 728 Quincy Street Northwest, died Monday at the home of a niece, Mrs. Raymond Swan, 704 Quincy Street Northwest. Her father, the late George W. Talbert, was a Washington wholesale grocer with the firm of Talbert & McCauley during the Civil War. She was the widow of George Hart Carver, who died about 10 years ago. A brother, E. Hume Talbert of Washington, and nieces and nephews survive.

Rowley, G.W.U. Grad, Dies in Coral Gables

Clifford Rowley, 57, Chicago attorney, died yesterday at Coral Gables, Fla., after a long illness, according to a telegram received here. Mr. Rowley, a graduate from George Washington University, is surivived by his wife, Mrs. Rose Marie Rowley, Chicago, Ill., and a sister, Mrs. Bertha Morgan, Washington.

Frank C. Patridge

Proctor, Vt., March 2 (AP).—Frank C. Partridge, 81, a former United States Senator and chairman of the board of directors of the Vermont Marble Co., died at his home today after a short illness.

Partridge, a Republican, served in the Senate in 1930-31, having been appointed by Gov. John Weeks to serve the remainder of the term of Senator Frank L. Greene, who died while in office.

Obituaries

Arthur Smith's Rites Tomorrow, Was Showman

Funeral services for Arthur Lesley Smith, 50, theatrical manager, will be held tomorrow at Westminster, Md., with burial at Church of God Cemetery near Carrollton. Mr. Smith died Monday after a long illness at Mount Wilson Sanitarium.

Mr. Smith is the son of the late T. Arthur Smith, and brother of Renoux Smith, 130 E Street Southeast, who jointly conducted a concert bureau in Washington and Baltimore for many years. He began his career as a juvenile actor and later managed a number of road companies in Pennsylvania. At one time, Mr. Smith managed the road companies of Ann Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose." For the last five years, he lived in retirement.

Mr. Smith is survived by his wife, two sons, T. Arthur Smith 2d and Gene Kenneth Smith, and his aunt, Mrs. Helene Heathcote Guild, all of Washington.

Margaret Cox Will Be Buried At Mount Olivet

Requiem mass for Miss Margaret M. Cox, who was born in Washington and lived here all her 87 years, will be celebrated at 9 a. m. today at Holy Trinity Church, Thirty-sixth and O Streets Northwest. Burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery will be private.

Miss Cox, who lived at 3033 P Street, died Monday at a Washington hospital. An invalid for a number of years, she was the last of a large Washington family. A brother, John F. Cox, well-known lawyer, died about 12 years ago. Miss Cox was active in Catholic affairs and was a worker for the Christ Child Society.

Survivors are three nieces, Miss Lena Cox of Cleveland, Ohio; Miss Frances Cox and Mrs. Thomas L. Hume, both of Washington, and a nephew, George T. Cox, of this city.

Mrs. Philippa Hill Rites Today

Mrs. Philippa Jones Hill, former resident of Washington, who died Monday at her home in Madison, Va., will be buried in her native town of Culpeper, Va., in Fairview Cemetery following servies today at 2:30 p. m. at the Stradley funeral home there.

Mrs. Hill, the wife of Thomas Temple Hill, retired Navy Department employe, had been ill three years. She made her home at 2904 P Street Northwest for 24 years before moving to Madison last April. She had been an active worker in the First Baptist Church here.

Mrs. Hill was a past regent of Fort McHenry Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution and had served as State chaplain for the District Daughters.

Surviving are her husband, two children, S. Jones Hill of Arlington, Va., and Mrs. Joseph B. Fray of Madison; two grandchildren, Joseph Jackson Fray and John Temple Fray; three sisters, Mrs. E. J. Eggborn and Mrs. P. M. Graves of Culpeper, and Miss Janie F. Jones of Norfolk, Va., and a brother, W. S. Jones of Culpeper.

Santa Fe Prelate

Sante Fe., N. M., March 2 (INS).—The Most Rev. Rudolph A. Gerken, Archbishop of Sante Fe, died today in St. Vincent's Hospital after suffering a stroke several hours earlier at his home.

Income taxes should be paid out of savings of current income, if possible. But if you have been unable to save up enough to pay your taxes and you expect to borrow now and repay from income, investigate Household's plan. No endorsers needed—no credit inquiries. If your tax is $200, you borrow $50 on March 15 and repay in 3 monthly installments of $17.34. Thus the loan cost is only $2.02.

Announcing

UNITED'S
NEW LOAN OFFICES
AUTO and Signature LOANS

The United Finance Company, affiliated with a nationally known finance institution, is pleased to announce the opening of two new loan offices, conveniently located to serve you best. These offices are licensed and supervised for your protection by the Administrator of Loan Laws of Maryland. You are cordially invited to become acquainted with our friendly, fast, confidential service which has won thousands of friends over the years.

PAY DAY LOANS
$5 TO $50
A plan to help you when you need cash in a hurry. You can get $5 to $50 in just a few minutes. We try to make a loan to every worthy person. More than 90% of our signature loans are made without co-signers. It's easy to qualify. Your promise to pay is good enough for us. Other Signature Loans up to $300.

INCOME TAX LOANS*
If you've been unable to save enough to pay your taxes due March 15th, come in and see how easy it is to get the money you need. You can get $10 to $275, or more, and pay back in a year on easy terms to fit your income.

AUTO LOANS
$10 TO $300—QUICKLY
Cash on most any make or model car, in a few minutes. No red tape. No embarrassing investigations. Bring in the certificate of title of your car and get the whole amount in cash quickly. No deductions, penalties or wage assignments. Quick, confidential service.

GET OUT OF DEBT PLAN
In keeping with the Government's fight to control the cost of living, it is necessary that you pay your debts! Just make a list of your outstanding bills and bring to our office. Usually you can get all you need to pay them all off at one time. Then you only pay one payment at one place each month instead of scattered payments at different places. It's simple, quick, convenient. Come in today and see for yourself.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Flip No Like Lip — By Milton Caniff

WELL, CADET LEE, HOW'S IT GOING?
ALL RIGHT, MAJOR CORKIN — BUT I'VE BEEN AROUND PILOTS SO LONG I KNOW A LOT OF THE PRELIMINARY STUFF...
THE AMERICAN GROUND SCHOOL OFFICERS HAVE GIVEN ME BOOKS TO COVER THE LECTURES IN CHINESE...I KEEP UP, SIR!
PRETTY CONFIDENT, AREN'T YOU, LEE?
WELL, SIR, I KNOW WHAT I CAN DO...
YOU'RE COCKY, CADET LEE — AND THE CHINESE UPPER CLASSMEN AREN'T TAKING IT OUT OF YOUR HIDE BECAUSE YOU'RE AN AMERICAN...
SO I THINK YOU AND I HAD BETTER HAVE A LITTLE SESSION TO SEE WHAT YOU CAN'T DO!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

YOU SEE, CRAYTON, THE FORGERY MUST BE CRUDE! WE WANT IT SO OBVIOUS THAT THE DUMBEST CLERK AT MR. PARKER'S BANK WILL CATCH IT!
LET ME SEE IF I FOLLOW YOU... WE TAKE THIS PAGE WITH THE OLD MAN'S SIGNATURE...TORN OUTA "OLIVER TWIST"...AND WRITE A CASH ORDER FOR ONE GRAND ABOVE THE NAME?
...PAYABLE TO PATTI PARKER! OH, YES...AND THE ORDER WILL BE IN MRS. WORTH'S HANDWRITING! THAT'S WHERE YOUR SKILL COMES IN!
YEAH...I COULD FAKE IT...IF I HAD A GOOD SAMPLE OF HER WRITING TO GO BY!
TAKE THESE BOOKS AND SLIP UP THE BACK STAIRS! I'LL BRING YOU THE SAMPLE WITHIN AN HOUR!

MICKEY FINN — Busy Days! — By Lank Leonard

TOM TOLD MICKEY THAT HIS THREE WEEKS IN THE DETENTION CAMP WOULD FLY BY! THEY DID — AND NOW HIS TRAINING PERIOD IS ALMOST OVER!
I THINK I'LL PASS UP THE MOVIES TONIGHT, MICKEY!
WELL, I'M GOING WITH TOM — HE SAID HE'D MEET ME OVER AT THE SHIP'S STORE!

MR. AND MRS. — It Happens in Every Home — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

WHY, JOE! YOU'RE DROPPING A LOT OF MONEY!
HANG IT, SO I AM. HOLE IN THAT POCKET
HOW CAN YOU BE SO CARELESS?
SHOULD HAVE REMEMBERED WHEN I CHANGED MY TROUSERS
HOLE IN RIGHT-HAND POCKET OF THESE PANTS. HOLE IN LEFT-HAND POCKET OF MY OTHERS. FORGOT WHEN I CHANGED MY MONEY FROM ONE TO THE OTHER
I'LL BET YOU LOSE A LOT WITHOUT KNOWING IT
WELL, FIX THESE UP TODAY AND YOU CAN SEW MY OTHERS TOMORROW

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

BUT, SUSIE! ALL I SAID WAS, TAKE IT EASY AND DON'T GET TOO TIRED!
AND I SAID, I WISH YOU'D GO DOWN TO YOUR OFFICE AND TEND TO YOUR OWN BUSINESS!
IT'S A FINE STATE OF AFFAIRS WHEN A WOMAN CAN'T ENJOY HERSELF IN HER OWN HOME!

DIXIE DUGAN — Who Is He? — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

HI YA, DIXIE BABY! REMEMBER ME?!
YOUR VOICE SOUNDS FAMILIAR — TOO FAMILIAR
NA-NA-WOTTA DAME! YER SWELLGANT! RIGHT FROM DA SHOULDER! WELL, I'M THE GUY YOU WUZ GONNA SPANK WIT A RULER WHEN YOU TOUGHT I WUZ A KID-REMEMBER??
YOU'RE STILL A KID — AND I SHOULD'VE USED THAT BALL BAT!
HO-BO-NO-DAT'S DA WAY I LIKES THEAR YA TALK, KIDDO — LOOK, BRIGHT EYES — I'M PICKIN' YA UP AT EIGHT TONIGHT — SEE?? AN' I DON'T LIKE WAITIN', SEE??
AND I DON'T EITHER, YOU MARVELOUS HUNK OF MAN — I'LL BE READY AT SEVEN — I'M ALL A'TWITTER, KIDDER!
AW — DAT DAME! SHE DONE SUMP'M T'ME!
AN SOMETHIN'S TELLIN' ME SHE'S A'GONNA DO SUMP'M MORE TO YA — TAKE IT EASY, BARNEY!
BARNEY? FIRST IT WAS JOE DUGAN — THEN EDWARD LAWSON — ?

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Demon Fires — By Frank Martinek

WHERE DID YOU COME FROM?
SHANGRI LA!
WHAT IS THIS ON-BI, DON'T YOU LIVED IN JAPAN ONCE.
IT'S SERIOUS. RED, IT MEANS DEMON FIRES. IT LOOKS BAD!
I WARNED YOU NOT TO SPEAK, BIG MOUTH!

JOE PALOOKA — Off at Last — By Ham Fisher

HIP HIP H'RAY!
I--I WISH'T I COULD OF SAID SOMETHIN', SIR-- I'M SO PROUD A THIS -- I JIST COULDN'T--
THAT'S FINE, JOE. JERRY SPOKE FOR BOTH OF YOU. IT WAS A GREAT SPEECH.
IT WAS AWFUL SILLY OF JERRY T'TURN DOWN SERGEANTS STRIPES JIST BECAUSE I DID.
HE'S A GREAT LAD. YOU'VE BOTH EARNED STRIPES IF ANYONE HAS. IT'S A SHAME BUT I KNOW YOU HAVE YOUR REASON.
HEY KID--THERE'S THE LAST LOOK-- IT'S OCEAN FROM HERE ON.
WE'RE GONNA SEE THE CUE OUTFIT. I CAN'T WAIT!

JANE ARDEN — I Wish I Knew — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

SECRET AGENTS — HUNTING ME DOWN — BUT IF I STRIKE FIRST — THAT'S IT —
LOVE THING ISN'T A THING YOU CAN TURN ON AND OFF LIKE A SWITCH, JANE — I KNOW THAT — WHILE JANE AND BERTIN, UNAWARE OF THEIR NEW ENEMY —
AND I DO LEAD SORT OF A DANGEROUS LIFE —
PERHAPS I HAVEN'T THE RIGHT TO ASK YOU — DON'T TALK LIKE THAT — YOUR BRAVERY AND THE LIFE YOU LEAD ARE WHAT MAKE YOU ATTRACTIVE!

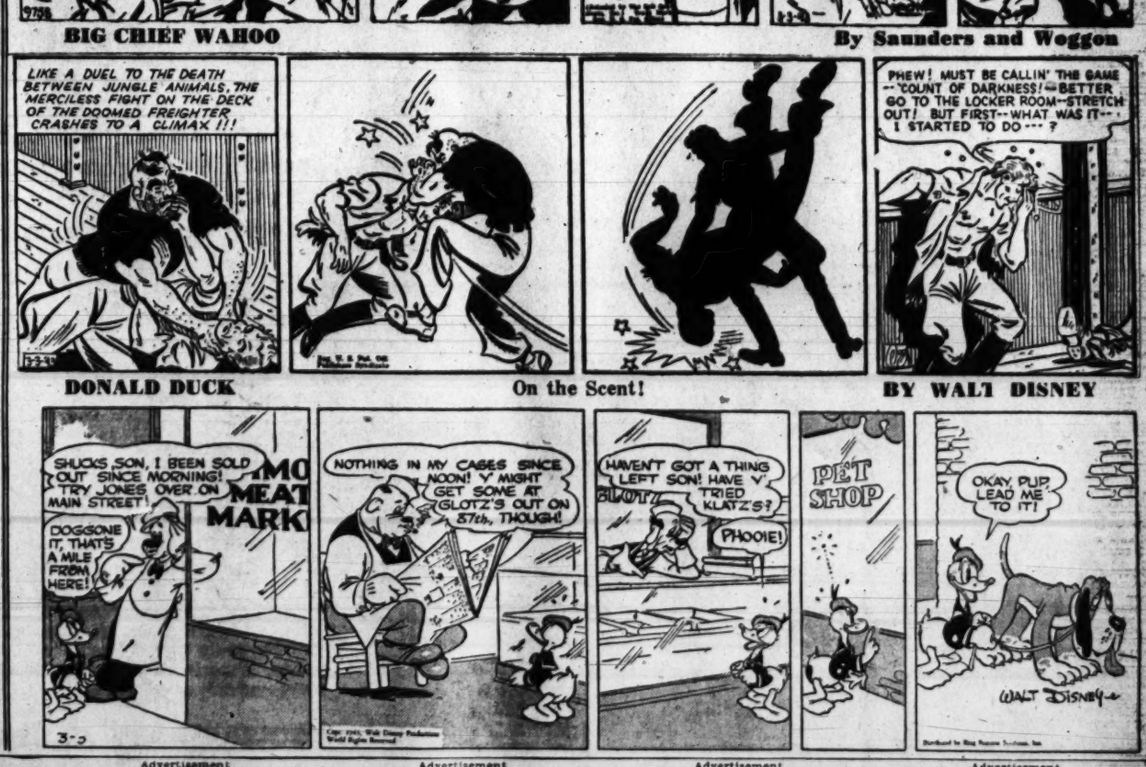
SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

BOMBS RAIN CEASELESSLY DOWN UPON THE ALLIED CONVOY AS THE NAZI PLANES ATTACK WITH DEADLY FURY.
THERE'S ONE LESS JERKY TO PLAGUE US!
THEY OUGHT TO TAKE SOME OF THOSE PEOPLE BACK HOME WHO STILL FEEL THE WAR IS A REMOTE THING AND PUT THEM ON THIS DECK WITH US!
I CAN'T UNDERSTAND WHY THEY FAIL TO ATTACK OUR PARTICULAR SHIP.
MAYBE THE NAZIS KNOW THAT THE "SEATTLE" BEARS A CHARMED LIFE.
WITH EACH MOMENT THE FOE'S BOMBING GROWS MORE ACCURATE... ONTO THE SCENE OF BATTLE WHIZZES THE MAN OF TOMORROW...
LET ME IN ON THIS!!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

WHERE DID YOU COME FROM?
SHANGRI LA!
WHAT IS THIS ON-BI, DON'T YOU LIVED IN JAPAN ONCE.
IT'S SERIOUS. RED, IT MEANS DEMON FIRES. IT LOOKS BAD!
I WARNED YOU NOT TO SPEAK, BIG MOUTH!

DONALD DUCK — On the Scent! — BY WALT DISNEY



LIKE A DUEL TO THE DEATH BETWEEN JUNGLE ANIMALS, THE MERCILESS FIGHT ON THE DECK OF THE DOOMED FREIGHTER CRASHES TO A CLIMAX !!!
PHEW! MUST BE CALLIN' THE GAME -- 'COUNT OF DARKNESS! -- BETTER GO TO THE LOCKER ROOM -- STRETCH OUT! BUT FIRST -- WHAT WAS IT -- I STARTED TO DO --- ?
SHUCKS SON, I BEEN SOLD OUT SINCE MORNING! TRY JONES OVER ON MAIN STREET!
DOGGONE IT, THAT'S A MILE FROM HERE!
NOTHING IN MY CASES SINCE NOON! Y' MIGHT GET SOME AT GLOTZ'S OUT ON 57th, THOUGH!
HAVEN'T GOT A THING I LEFT SON! HAVE Y' TRIED KLATZ'S?
PHOOIE!
PET SHOP
OKAY, PUP, LEAD ME TO IT!

SELLS TWO TRACTS OF LAND THROUGH ONE POST WANT AD

That is the success story of Mr. I. B. Brooks, of Orange, Va.

Mr. Brooks advertised the two tracts of land one Sunday and on the following Monday he sold both pieces of land to Washington Post readers.

Yes, real estate ads in The Post bring quick results . . . and at very low cost. Twenty-two cents a line (and even less per line for three or more insertions) is all it costs.

To place a Want Ad in The Post just call NAtional 4200 and ask for an ad-taker.

THE WOMAN ON THE TRUCK — BY BUD HILL

DID YOU FIND THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH! YOU'RE LOOKING WONDERFUL — AND JUST FULL OF ZIP!
I JUST FOUND MY DIET WAS DEFICIENT IN VITAMIN B COMPLEX
SOUNDS AWFUL. WHAT IS IT?
IT JUST MEANS I WASN'T GETTING ENOUGH OF THOSE AMAZING VITAMINS FOUND SO PLENTIFULLY IN YEAST. LACK OF THEM IN THE DIET KEEPS MILLIONS FEELING DRAGGED DOWN. SO — I STARTED DRINKING FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST — 2 CAKES A DAY
U.S.C.G.
THAT'S RIGHT — DRINKING IT, IN TOMATO JUICE. I CALL IT MY VITAMIN COCKTAIL* — BECAUSE IT CONTAINS EVERY VITAMIN KNOWN TO BE NEEDED IN HUMAN NUTRITION. BUT — YOU HAVE TO KEEP AT IT A WEEK OR LONGER. MANY SEE RESULTS IN SEVEN DAYS
THINK I'LL TRY IT. TELL ME HOW
JUST GET YOURSELF A WEEK'S SUPPLY OF FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST — 14 CAKES. KEEPS PERFECTLY IN THE REFRIGERATOR. BUT DON'T JUST DROP A CAKE IN TOMATO JUICE — MASH IT IN A DRY GLASS WITH A FORK, ADD A LITTLE JUICE AND STIR TILL BLENDED. THEN ADD THE REST OF THE JUICE.
YOU'LL LOVE IT!

*Two Vitamin Cocktails contain the following proportions of the minimum daily requirements from yeast, 100% of Vitamins A, B_1, and D_2; 14% to 20% of B_2 (also 2 to 3 mgs. of nicotinic from tomato juice, 100% of vitamin C.

If you bake at home, use Fleischmann's Yeast with the yellow label. It is the only yeast containing Vitamin B Complex and added amounts of Vitamins A and D_2

We are very happy to be credited as an approved retailer of Regulation Women's Reserve Uniforms to be sold under conditions as stipulated in the Women's Reserve Uniform Plan established by the U. S. Navy. So pleased in fact, we've reserved a separate section of our Third Floor for you service women, many of whom have given up promising careers in order that you might release men for service at the front. We're here to offer the same complete stocks . . . the same excellent fitting and alteration service that stamps our Naval Officers' departments. We've "read the regulations," we've got the things you need . . . and there's "welcome" on the mat for every Wave and Spar in Washington!

Want to Join Either Branch of the Service?

THEN COME MEET THESE 'WAVES' TOMORROW IN THE NEW UNIFORM DEPT. ON THE HECHT CO. THIRD FLOOR

The need is great! More and more men are being called to active service. You may have hesitated because you were uncertain as to the requirements for Waves and Spars. Read below for general information and Qualifications for WAVES and SPARS.
